Section 1: Support - Sydney

A cross-functional review between Data and Finance identified 9 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
In January, the Mobile team in Austin migrated the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 20%.
The Austin office hosted 8 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 93 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Security and Marketing identified 5 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
In October, the Legal team in Warsaw completed the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 19%.
In April, the Support team in Chicago expanded its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 3%.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $600,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Security and Sales identified 10 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Legal identified 5 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $173,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
The Singapore office hosted 26 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 89 out of 100.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $563,000, in line with the plan for the year.
In April, the Platform team in Osaka migrated the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 23%.
The Dublin office hosted 7 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 71 out of 100.
In May, the Support team in Osaka consolidated the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 12%.
Security closed 29 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 23 hours.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $187,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $581,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $50,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $890,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $860,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $123,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Security closed 317 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 20 hours.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Support identified 7 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.

Section 1: Legal - Singapore

Support closed 46 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 5 hours.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $857,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Security and Finance identified 8 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $239,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
In April, the Legal team in Madrid reviewed the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 10%.
Finance closed 118 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 4 hours.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $592,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Legal closed 85 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 3 hours.
The Toronto office hosted 20 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 76 out of 100.
Mobile closed 41 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 8 hours.
The Berlin office hosted 33 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 70 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Finance identified 4 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
The Singapore office hosted 24 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 81 out of 100.
Marketing closed 275 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 13 hours.
The Madrid office hosted 33 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 94 out of 100.
The Berlin office hosted 7 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 93 out of 100.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $812,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Security and Support identified 6 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
In June, the Sales team in Madrid redesigned the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 20%.
In October, the Support team in Singapore reviewed the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 3%.
In September, the Platform team in Toronto audited the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 7%.
In February, the Finance team in Chicago expanded the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 20%.
The Madrid office hosted 34 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 87 out of 100.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $79,000, slightly under the plan for the year.

Section 1: Data - Sydney

In September, the Sales team in Singapore completed the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 13%.
Payments closed 264 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 26 hours.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $147,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
In December, the Support team in Chicago expanded its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 21%.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Support identified 7 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
The Toronto office hosted 26 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 75 out of 100.
The Sydney office hosted 19 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 76 out of 100.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $132,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Finance closed 39 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 26 hours.
A cross-functional review between Data and Finance identified 6 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Data and Legal identified 5 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $749,000, in line with the plan for the year.
In August, the Legal team in Berlin reviewed the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 5%.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Finance identified 7 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $203,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $683,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Security and Support identified 11 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Legal identified 6 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
In April, the Support team in Osaka expanded the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 11%.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $88,000, in line with the plan for the year.
The Chicago office hosted 32 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 93 out of 100.
In April, the Mobile team in Austin redesigned the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 9%.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Sales identified 11 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
The Sydney office hosted 38 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 76 out of 100.

Section 1: Sales - Toronto

Support closed 26 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 25 hours.
In March, the Finance team in Warsaw completed its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 11%.
Sales closed 150 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 12 hours.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $838,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
In July, the Data team in Toronto audited the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 19%.
Finance closed 261 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 28 hours.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Legal identified 4 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.
The Singapore office hosted 18 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 72 out of 100.
Security closed 347 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 26 hours.
Finance closed 25 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 11 hours.
A cross-functional review between Data and Sales identified 11 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $49,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Data closed 278 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 23 hours.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Marketing identified 8 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
The Berlin office hosted 37 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 95 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Data and Support identified 6 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Security and Legal identified 9 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
The Singapore office hosted 8 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 86 out of 100.
Legal closed 170 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 3 hours.
A cross-functional review between Data and Sales identified 12 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $475,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
In December, the Mobile team in Dublin expanded its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 27%.
Sales closed 184 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 17 hours.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Sales identified 7 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $169,000, slightly under the plan for the year.

Section 1: Data - Austin

The Berlin office hosted 11 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 92 out of 100.
In March, the Legal team in Dublin redesigned the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 22%.
Mobile closed 367 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 25 hours.
Support closed 265 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 17 hours.
A cross-functional review between Data and Legal identified 10 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
In April, the Payments team in Osaka migrated the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 17%.
In June, the Payments team in Madrid redesigned the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 21%.
In March, the Platform team in Osaka redesigned the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 26%.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Sales identified 11 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Data and Finance identified 10 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $646,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Legal closed 314 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 24 hours.
A cross-functional review between Security and Support identified 8 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Legal identified 3 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Finance identified 2 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Legal identified 8 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $463,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
In June, the Mobile team in Toronto redesigned its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 18%.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Legal identified 3 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
Marketing closed 305 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 18 hours.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $545,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
The Madrid office hosted 30 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 81 out of 100.
The Austin office hosted 31 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 82 out of 100.
The Austin office hosted 21 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 72 out of 100.

Section 1: Security - Berlin

In September, the Legal team in Dublin migrated its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 22%.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $391,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
The Sydney office hosted 37 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 80 out of 100.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $551,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $175,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
In September, the Security team in Warsaw audited its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 12%.
In July, the Support team in Warsaw consolidated the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 16%.
In August, the Marketing team in Austin redesigned the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 23%.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Sales identified 9 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
In January, the Sales team in Berlin completed the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 4%.
In July, the Data team in Toronto consolidated its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 21%.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $729,000, in line with the plan for the year.
The Chicago office hosted 22 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 73 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Support identified 3 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $766,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $829,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
In September, the Mobile team in Dublin completed the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 15%.
A cross-functional review between Data and Sales identified 8 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Support identified 6 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Security and Sales identified 12 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Sales identified 12 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
The Toronto office hosted 32 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 83 out of 100.

Section 1: Sales - Chicago

In October, the Finance team in Toronto completed its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 13%.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $703,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Sales identified 3 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
The Madrid office hosted 4 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 82 out of 100.
In April, the Data team in Chicago expanded the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 16%.
Data closed 63 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 25 hours.
The Dublin office hosted 17 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 71 out of 100.
In June, the Legal team in Berlin completed its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 25%.
Marketing closed 171 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 21 hours.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Finance identified 10 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Finance identified 10 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
The Chicago office hosted 31 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 81 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Security and Finance identified 7 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $556,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
The Toronto office hosted 35 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 77 out of 100.
In March, the Support team in Warsaw audited its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 8%.
In June, the Finance team in Berlin migrated its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 8%.
Security closed 28 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 13 hours.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Finance identified 3 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Data and Marketing identified 11 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
In June, the Marketing team in Chicago migrated its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 27%.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Finance identified 5 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.

Section 1: Legal - Singapore

The Berlin office hosted 31 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 86 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Marketing identified 4 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Security and Legal identified 11 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $814,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Legal identified 10 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Data and Support identified 10 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
In May, the Finance team in Madrid audited the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 9%.
The Osaka office hosted 27 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 75 out of 100.
Mobile closed 35 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 10 hours.
The Austin office hosted 18 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 74 out of 100.
In April, the Support team in Warsaw completed the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 6%.
In July, the Mobile team in Dublin reviewed the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 27%.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $154,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
The Toronto office hosted 7 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 82 out of 100.
In December, the Payments team in Madrid completed the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 9%.
The Singapore office hosted 6 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 87 out of 100.
Mobile closed 141 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 27 hours.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $394,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Platform closed 343 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 30 hours.
The Chicago office hosted 7 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 91 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Marketing identified 3 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Support identified 10 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Support identified 4 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.

Section 1: Payments - Berlin

Security closed 92 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 22 hours.
The Osaka office hosted 9 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 95 out of 100.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $275,000, in line with the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Legal identified 10 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
The Chicago office hosted 23 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 72 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Data and Support identified 3 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
In January, the Security team in Berlin expanded its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 23%.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $274,000, in line with the plan for the year.
The Dublin office hosted 21 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 84 out of 100.
The Austin office hosted 22 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 96 out of 100.
Mobile closed 241 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 19 hours.
In January, the Marketing team in Austin expanded its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 5%.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Sales identified 8 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
Marketing closed 348 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 2 hours.
In February, the Sales team in Berlin expanded the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 28%.
In September, the Sales team in Sydney audited the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 19%.
The Dublin office hosted 8 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 84 out of 100.
In May, the Payments team in Toronto automated its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 24%.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Legal identified 7 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Security and Finance identified 10 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
The Dublin office hosted 7 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 90 out of 100.
In August, the Sales team in Sydney expanded the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 6%.
Security closed 115 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 11 hours.

Section 1: Security - Chicago

Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $521,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
In December, the Support team in Dublin reviewed its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 7%.
Finance closed 76 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 16 hours.
Sales closed 32 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 8 hours.
The Chicago office hosted 8 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 91 out of 100.
Support closed 324 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 15 hours.
Security closed 36 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 10 hours.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Legal identified 10 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
In May, the Sales team in Toronto reviewed the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 4%.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $216,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
In March, the Support team in Sydney completed its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 14%.
Mobile closed 328 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 10 hours.
The Sydney office hosted 33 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 79 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Sales identified 9 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.
The Singapore office hosted 18 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 89 out of 100.
Platform closed 313 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 25 hours.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Marketing identified 10 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
Finance closed 261 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 8 hours.
In June, the Data team in Berlin reviewed its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 12%.
In August, the Data team in Austin migrated the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 7%.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $427,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Security and Legal identified 11 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
Platform closed 115 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 25 hours.
A cross-functional review between Data and Support identified 6 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
Payments closed 378 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 19 hours.

Section 2: Finance - Osaka

Finance closed 52 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 25 hours.
The Toronto office hosted 28 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 95 out of 100.
In January, the Security team in Dublin automated the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 21%.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $182,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Marketing closed 345 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 10 hours.
Mobile closed 44 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 5 hours.
The Dublin office hosted 17 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 74 out of 100.
The Dublin office hosted 39 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 93 out of 100.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $547,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $583,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
In December, the Mobile team in Austin completed the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 3%.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Sales identified 3 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
In January, the Support team in Madrid redesigned the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 19%.
The Berlin office hosted 7 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 80 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Data and Sales identified 5 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
In July, the Platform team in Madrid audited the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 27%.
A cross-functional review between Security and Legal identified 10 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
In July, the Mobile team in Madrid audited the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 25%.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $760,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
In September, the Data team in Singapore completed its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 8%.
A cross-functional review between Security and Sales identified 4 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
In June, the Security team in Madrid reviewed the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 19%.

Section 2: Sales - Austin

Data closed 305 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 7 hours.
The Singapore office hosted 28 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 75 out of 100.
In March, the Payments team in Berlin redesigned the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 15%.
Finance closed 36 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 7 hours.
The Osaka office hosted 32 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 75 out of 100.
Security closed 145 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 22 hours.
The Toronto office hosted 9 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 81 out of 100.
Security closed 98 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 12 hours.
The Osaka office hosted 35 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 79 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Security and Marketing identified 4 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
Sales closed 355 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 21 hours.
Finance closed 243 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 21 hours.
In January, the Legal team in Austin automated its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 13%.
In June, the Platform team in Berlin consolidated the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 11%.
In July, the Marketing team in Osaka automated the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 19%.
In June, the Security team in Dublin automated its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 9%.
The Singapore office hosted 27 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 71 out of 100.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $500,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
The Chicago office hosted 15 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 81 out of 100.
The Chicago office hosted 11 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 83 out of 100.
Legal closed 206 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 21 hours.
The Singapore office hosted 30 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 90 out of 100.
The Sydney office hosted 26 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 72 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Support identified 12 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.

Section 2: Mobile - Sydney

Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $256,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
In January, the Marketing team in Austin reviewed the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 3%.
Finance closed 283 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 11 hours.
A cross-functional review between Security and Support identified 5 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
Data closed 104 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 17 hours.
Marketing closed 193 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 7 hours.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Sales identified 8 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
In April, the Security team in Warsaw redesigned the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 24%.
The Dublin office hosted 11 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 92 out of 100.
The Warsaw office hosted 26 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 91 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Legal identified 8 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
Mobile closed 111 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 23 hours.
In June, the Data team in Toronto consolidated the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 10%.
Marketing closed 114 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 24 hours.
The Toronto office hosted 25 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 75 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Marketing identified 8 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
In May, the Legal team in Dublin completed its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 4%.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Finance identified 10 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Support identified 8 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
The Chicago office hosted 8 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 70 out of 100.
Mobile closed 228 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 12 hours.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $364,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Support closed 189 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 19 hours.
The Chicago office hosted 29 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 73 out of 100.

Section 2: Finance - Austin

A cross-functional review between Mobile and Marketing identified 6 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
The Osaka office hosted 15 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 76 out of 100.
Platform closed 324 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 9 hours.
The Dublin office hosted 36 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 89 out of 100.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $378,000, in line with the plan for the year.
The Sydney office hosted 34 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 77 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Data and Sales identified 3 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
In December, the Support team in Toronto automated the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 19%.
Support closed 334 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 26 hours.
In May, the Sales team in Sydney completed the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 4%.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Support identified 6 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.
The Toronto office hosted 25 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 71 out of 100.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $375,000, in line with the plan for the year.
The Dublin office hosted 29 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 94 out of 100.
Mobile closed 81 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 28 hours.
In May, the Security team in Madrid reviewed the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 11%.
Platform closed 149 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 7 hours.
A cross-functional review between Security and Finance identified 5 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $662,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Data closed 366 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 18 hours.
Mobile closed 192 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 8 hours.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Support identified 6 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
The Sydney office hosted 30 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 78 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Data and Finance identified 4 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.

Section 2: Marketing - Sydney

In February, the Mobile team in Berlin consolidated the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 21%.
In November, the Mobile team in Berlin automated the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 16%.
Legal closed 50 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 14 hours.
The Warsaw office hosted 25 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 80 out of 100.
Security closed 169 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 9 hours.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Support identified 12 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
The Singapore office hosted 18 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 81 out of 100.
The Toronto office hosted 25 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 74 out of 100.
The Austin office hosted 18 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 71 out of 100.
In December, the Mobile team in Warsaw migrated the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 12%.
A cross-functional review between Data and Finance identified 5 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Support identified 4 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
In August, the Data team in Toronto migrated the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 22%.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $111,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Mobile closed 184 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 12 hours.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $191,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Payments closed 113 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 17 hours.
In June, the Sales team in Berlin automated the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 14%.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Support identified 9 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Legal identified 3 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
The Osaka office hosted 38 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 85 out of 100.
In April, the Finance team in Chicago consolidated the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 7%.

Section 2: Security - Osaka

Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $74,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
In May, the Platform team in Sydney migrated the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 7%.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $345,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Marketing closed 34 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 28 hours.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $64,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Security and Support identified 11 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
The Osaka office hosted 22 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 94 out of 100.
The Chicago office hosted 36 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 81 out of 100.
In June, the Sales team in Chicago consolidated the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 11%.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $515,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
In November, the Mobile team in Berlin consolidated the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 20%.
Mobile closed 249 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 22 hours.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $468,000, in line with the plan for the year.
In June, the Mobile team in Madrid redesigned its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 22%.
Platform closed 237 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 4 hours.
In July, the Platform team in Sydney expanded its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 26%.
Mobile closed 278 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 29 hours.
In September, the Finance team in Berlin consolidated the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 4%.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Support identified 9 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $514,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $255,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Finance identified 6 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
In July, the Payments team in Warsaw redesigned its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 23%.
The Dublin office hosted 11 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 89 out of 100.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $860,000, in line with the plan for the year.
In October, the Platform team in Warsaw expanded the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 24%.

Section 2: Platform - Warsaw

The Dublin office hosted 38 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 83 out of 100.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $378,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $468,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
The Sydney office hosted 32 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 92 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Marketing identified 4 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
In April, the Support team in Chicago reviewed the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 28%.
The Berlin office hosted 20 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 74 out of 100.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $336,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $826,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $323,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Data and Sales identified 11 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
The Sydney office hosted 29 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 91 out of 100.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $160,000, in line with the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Finance identified 8 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $810,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Marketing closed 104 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 5 hours.
The Osaka office hosted 12 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 95 out of 100.
Mobile closed 81 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 28 hours.
Legal closed 372 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 28 hours.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Finance identified 10 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
The Toronto office hosted 20 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 86 out of 100.
Security closed 205 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 27 hours.
A cross-functional review between Data and Finance identified 3 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
Legal closed 292 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 22 hours.
Payments closed 257 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 24 hours.
A cross-functional review between Security and Marketing identified 2 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.

Section 2: Legal - Warsaw

Finance closed 229 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 10 hours.
The Austin office hosted 31 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 78 out of 100.
In December, the Mobile team in Warsaw audited its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 18%.
Platform closed 350 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 2 hours.
The Berlin office hosted 37 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 95 out of 100.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $133,000, in line with the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Support identified 6 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
The Dublin office hosted 9 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 91 out of 100.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $460,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
The Toronto office hosted 23 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 84 out of 100.
Payments closed 221 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 6 hours.
The Singapore office hosted 20 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 76 out of 100.
In February, the Sales team in Madrid audited its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 6%.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $260,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Data closed 71 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 29 hours.
In May, the Legal team in Toronto automated the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 25%.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $865,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
In May, the Platform team in Warsaw expanded the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 19%.
Marketing closed 352 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 16 hours.
Mobile closed 342 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 28 hours.
A cross-functional review between Data and Finance identified 3 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.
In May, the Payments team in Dublin automated the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 24%.
A cross-functional review between Security and Finance identified 10 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
The Chicago office hosted 29 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 83 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Security and Finance identified 8 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.

Section 2: Mobile - Berlin

The Chicago office hosted 6 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 76 out of 100.
The Warsaw office hosted 38 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 86 out of 100.
The Singapore office hosted 20 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 74 out of 100.
The Austin office hosted 35 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 92 out of 100.
The Madrid office hosted 27 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 95 out of 100.
The Warsaw office hosted 37 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 77 out of 100.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $573,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $425,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
The Austin office hosted 4 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 76 out of 100.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $80,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
The Singapore office hosted 20 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 91 out of 100.
The Berlin office hosted 36 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 94 out of 100.
In December, the Security team in Chicago redesigned the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 16%.
Finance closed 362 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 29 hours.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $156,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
In December, the Legal team in Chicago redesigned the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 6%.
The Madrid office hosted 20 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 73 out of 100.
In September, the Finance team in Sydney redesigned its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 24%.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Support identified 10 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $201,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Data and Sales identified 2 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Security and Legal identified 3 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
The Sydney office hosted 28 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 90 out of 100.

Section 2: Legal - Dublin

Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $108,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $269,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $564,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
In February, the Support team in Osaka audited its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 15%.
The Berlin office hosted 11 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 87 out of 100.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $150,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
In November, the Mobile team in Madrid audited its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 24%.
The Madrid office hosted 19 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 80 out of 100.
Platform closed 169 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 18 hours.
In October, the Sales team in Sydney automated the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 10%.
A cross-functional review between Security and Support identified 7 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.
The Dublin office hosted 37 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 87 out of 100.
The Austin office hosted 29 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 90 out of 100.
Payments closed 314 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 29 hours.
The Sydney office hosted 22 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 84 out of 100.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $201,000, in line with the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Support identified 6 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
The Berlin office hosted 10 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 78 out of 100.
The Madrid office hosted 5 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 94 out of 100.
In August, the Security team in Sydney automated its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 11%.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Sales identified 11 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $541,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
In September, the Sales team in Warsaw migrated the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 10%.

Section 3: Legal - Dublin

In December, the Finance team in Dublin reviewed the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 18%.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $525,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Payments closed 149 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 21 hours.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $777,000, in line with the plan for the year.
In September, the Finance team in Toronto expanded its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 20%.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $246,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $374,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Security and Sales identified 7 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
Payments closed 159 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 30 hours.
In October, the Sales team in Madrid redesigned the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 10%.
The Osaka office hosted 37 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 74 out of 100.
Legal closed 240 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 7 hours.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $516,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $476,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Marketing closed 163 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 17 hours.
The Osaka office hosted 6 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 89 out of 100.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $582,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Marketing identified 3 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
Mobile closed 58 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 11 hours.
The Berlin office hosted 7 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 91 out of 100.
The Berlin office hosted 27 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 87 out of 100.
Platform closed 98 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 11 hours.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $595,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
The Warsaw office hosted 22 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 89 out of 100.
Payments closed 397 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 23 hours.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Legal identified 9 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.

Section 3: Sales - Warsaw

The Madrid office hosted 12 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 81 out of 100.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $311,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
In July, the Legal team in Chicago expanded the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 14%.
In May, the Data team in Austin reviewed the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 28%.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $117,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $779,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $755,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $709,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $542,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Legal identified 10 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $377,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
The Chicago office hosted 6 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 81 out of 100.
Sales closed 138 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 5 hours.
The Berlin office hosted 5 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 73 out of 100.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $127,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
The Chicago office hosted 10 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 72 out of 100.
The Singapore office hosted 9 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 71 out of 100.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $369,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $166,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
In November, the Security team in Warsaw automated its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 27%.
Sales closed 35 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 23 hours.
The Singapore office hosted 39 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 95 out of 100.
In August, the Data team in Madrid audited the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 23%.
Security closed 290 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 11 hours.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $595,000, slightly under the plan for the year.

Section 3: Security - Osaka

Spending on the internal training program came in at $433,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Payments closed 112 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 4 hours.
Security closed 79 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 27 hours.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $61,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $464,000, in line with the plan for the year.
The Berlin office hosted 15 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 87 out of 100.
Payments closed 165 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 13 hours.
Finance closed 189 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 28 hours.
The Toronto office hosted 5 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 77 out of 100.
The Madrid office hosted 39 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 81 out of 100.
In October, the Marketing team in Toronto consolidated the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 18%.
The Chicago office hosted 24 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 94 out of 100.
The Madrid office hosted 38 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 74 out of 100.
Payments closed 227 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 8 hours.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Support identified 2 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
In February, the Finance team in Austin consolidated its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 21%.
Marketing closed 385 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 3 hours.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $346,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
The Warsaw office hosted 24 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 87 out of 100.
Sales closed 30 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 10 hours.
Platform closed 98 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 2 hours.
In May, the Payments team in Singapore consolidated the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 7%.
The Osaka office hosted 22 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 85 out of 100.
In August, the Mobile team in Berlin automated the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 18%.
A cross-functional review between Data and Finance identified 4 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Data and Legal identified 8 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.

Section 3: Finance - Toronto

The Toronto office hosted 15 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 94 out of 100.
The Chicago office hosted 30 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 90 out of 100.
In March, the Marketing team in Dublin completed its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 24%.
In April, the Mobile team in Osaka completed the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 26%.
Finance closed 380 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 10 hours.
The Sydney office hosted 23 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 93 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Legal identified 3 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $691,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
In March, the Sales team in Singapore automated the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 26%.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $750,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $707,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Payments closed 105 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 16 hours.
Legal closed 212 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 22 hours.
In May, the Sales team in Berlin completed the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 7%.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $566,000, in line with the plan for the year.
The Singapore office hosted 6 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 83 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Security and Sales identified 6 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $694,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $418,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $321,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
In December, the Security team in Austin reviewed the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 16%.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Support identified 8 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.
The Dublin office hosted 29 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 74 out of 100.

Section 3: Platform - Osaka

In January, the Security team in Osaka migrated its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 6%.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $91,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Platform closed 371 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 10 hours.
Payments closed 336 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 20 hours.
In December, the Payments team in Chicago redesigned its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 12%.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $838,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
The Warsaw office hosted 7 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 77 out of 100.
Mobile closed 97 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 17 hours.
In September, the Platform team in Austin completed its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 21%.
In August, the Sales team in Chicago consolidated the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 15%.
In October, the Security team in Singapore consolidated the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 10%.
In August, the Finance team in Austin redesigned the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 28%.
Payments closed 105 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 10 hours.
The Sydney office hosted 12 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 85 out of 100.
The Chicago office hosted 18 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 82 out of 100.
Mobile closed 341 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 18 hours.
In November, the Payments team in Sydney redesigned its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 9%.
The Toronto office hosted 22 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 89 out of 100.
In December, the Payments team in Singapore migrated its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 19%.
In June, the Sales team in Warsaw consolidated its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 21%.
The Singapore office hosted 7 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 74 out of 100.
Platform closed 228 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 22 hours.
The Chicago office hosted 26 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 87 out of 100.

Section 3: Finance - Austin

The Singapore office hosted 29 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 83 out of 100.
The Dublin office hosted 38 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 90 out of 100.
In February, the Mobile team in Toronto expanded its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 16%.
Security closed 114 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 22 hours.
The Dublin office hosted 12 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 89 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Sales identified 10 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Security and Finance identified 11 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Support identified 10 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
Platform closed 356 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 27 hours.
In September, the Legal team in Dublin completed its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 21%.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $630,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $238,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Sales closed 88 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 26 hours.
A cross-functional review between Data and Legal identified 11 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $283,000, in line with the plan for the year.
The Chicago office hosted 12 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 80 out of 100.
The Singapore office hosted 36 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 79 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Support identified 8 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Data and Support identified 3 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $750,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $666,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
The Dublin office hosted 33 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 95 out of 100.

Section 3: Platform - Berlin

The Chicago office hosted 9 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 81 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Sales identified 11 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Legal identified 10 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
In September, the Platform team in Sydney completed the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 13%.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $620,000, in line with the plan for the year.
In May, the Marketing team in Toronto reviewed its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 22%.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Sales identified 12 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
In May, the Sales team in Dublin completed the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 27%.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $210,000, in line with the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Security and Support identified 7 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
Sales closed 52 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 29 hours.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Sales identified 2 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
Security closed 74 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 9 hours.
Platform closed 298 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 9 hours.
The Berlin office hosted 18 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 81 out of 100.
Finance closed 132 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 17 hours.
In February, the Finance team in Sydney migrated the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 20%.
In May, the Marketing team in Chicago reviewed the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 13%.
A cross-functional review between Security and Finance identified 5 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
The Sydney office hosted 4 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 77 out of 100.
Mobile closed 217 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 5 hours.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $862,000, in line with the plan for the year.
The Berlin office hosted 25 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 77 out of 100.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $220,000, slightly above the plan for the year.

Section 3: Data - Dublin

The Warsaw office hosted 11 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 86 out of 100.
In April, the Payments team in Warsaw expanded its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 17%.
A cross-functional review between Security and Sales identified 9 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
In December, the Support team in Singapore redesigned the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 24%.
The Singapore office hosted 16 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 93 out of 100.
In February, the Marketing team in Osaka completed its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 8%.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Sales identified 9 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
The Dublin office hosted 25 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 86 out of 100.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $766,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
The Madrid office hosted 21 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 88 out of 100.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $851,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
In February, the Security team in Warsaw expanded the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 22%.
The Chicago office hosted 16 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 84 out of 100.
Data closed 286 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 10 hours.
In April, the Security team in Osaka redesigned its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 6%.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $853,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
The Austin office hosted 12 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 72 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Sales identified 11 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
In December, the Platform team in Warsaw migrated its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 27%.
Payments closed 163 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 30 hours.
Data closed 190 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 6 hours.
Security closed 86 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 26 hours.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $845,000, in line with the plan for the year.
The Austin office hosted 23 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 84 out of 100.

Section 3: Data - Madrid

The Singapore office hosted 28 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 75 out of 100.
In March, the Marketing team in Sydney completed its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 6%.
The Austin office hosted 15 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 80 out of 100.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $163,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
In May, the Mobile team in Austin reviewed its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 18%.
The Madrid office hosted 17 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 91 out of 100.
The Osaka office hosted 8 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 75 out of 100.
Platform closed 331 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 13 hours.
In December, the Marketing team in Chicago automated the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 18%.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $537,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Finance identified 3 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
The Warsaw office hosted 23 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 88 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Finance identified 9 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
Support closed 164 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 20 hours.
In February, the Security team in Osaka automated the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 24%.
In June, the Payments team in Singapore redesigned its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 8%.
Support closed 150 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 13 hours.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $562,000, in line with the plan for the year.
In May, the Legal team in Sydney redesigned the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 14%.
Marketing closed 221 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 15 hours.
The Madrid office hosted 27 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 82 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Security and Sales identified 7 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $712,000, in line with the plan for the year.

Section 3: Support - Berlin

Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $479,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $142,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $283,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
The Madrid office hosted 31 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 77 out of 100.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $564,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $299,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $77,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Data closed 211 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 30 hours.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Sales identified 11 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
Payments closed 222 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 26 hours.
A cross-functional review between Security and Finance identified 6 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
Payments closed 384 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 26 hours.
In December, the Finance team in Austin automated the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 16%.
In September, the Finance team in Chicago reviewed its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 21%.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $602,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $106,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $858,000, in line with the plan for the year.
The Warsaw office hosted 31 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 83 out of 100.
The Berlin office hosted 25 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 75 out of 100.
The Chicago office hosted 13 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 90 out of 100.
The Chicago office hosted 7 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 80 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Legal identified 6 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
Security closed 229 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 14 hours.
Security closed 22 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 16 hours.

Section 4: Payments - Austin

The Toronto office hosted 28 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 94 out of 100.
In May, the Marketing team in Toronto migrated its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 25%.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $847,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Security closed 218 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 13 hours.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $571,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
The Madrid office hosted 18 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 92 out of 100.
In May, the Security team in Berlin reviewed the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 16%.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Support identified 11 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $518,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $285,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Data and Finance identified 12 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Finance identified 10 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
Marketing closed 301 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 30 hours.
Sales closed 294 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 29 hours.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $896,000, in line with the plan for the year.
In December, the Payments team in Osaka redesigned the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 28%.
Support closed 285 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 18 hours.
The Osaka office hosted 22 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 83 out of 100.
Support closed 293 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 3 hours.
Sales closed 220 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 21 hours.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Sales identified 11 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
In January, the Sales team in Madrid consolidated its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 16%.
The Chicago office hosted 39 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 85 out of 100.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $391,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $723,000, in line with the plan for the year.

Section 4: Sales - Dublin

The Warsaw office hosted 18 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 81 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Security and Support identified 4 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Marketing identified 7 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
The Osaka office hosted 8 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 90 out of 100.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $599,000, in line with the plan for the year.
In November, the Marketing team in Berlin completed the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 19%.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $291,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $424,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $641,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $166,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
The Warsaw office hosted 7 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 89 out of 100.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $397,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
The Madrid office hosted 39 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 77 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Data and Marketing identified 12 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Sales identified 9 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
Data closed 244 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 24 hours.
In September, the Platform team in Singapore completed the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 14%.
The Sydney office hosted 22 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 71 out of 100.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $834,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Marketing identified 7 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
Payments closed 179 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 20 hours.
In November, the Sales team in Dublin expanded its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 26%.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Support identified 7 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.

Section 4: Data - Toronto

The Toronto office hosted 17 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 77 out of 100.
The Sydney office hosted 11 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 80 out of 100.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $595,000, in line with the plan for the year.
The Osaka office hosted 16 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 95 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Finance identified 10 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Data and Legal identified 11 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Data and Sales identified 8 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Data and Legal identified 8 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Sales identified 10 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Security and Sales identified 6 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
The Warsaw office hosted 8 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 76 out of 100.
In May, the Sales team in Toronto consolidated the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 10%.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $59,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
In December, the Payments team in Warsaw expanded the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 4%.
Mobile closed 91 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 9 hours.
Marketing closed 360 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 3 hours.
Data closed 196 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 18 hours.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Marketing identified 4 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
Platform closed 40 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 5 hours.
In May, the Sales team in Chicago completed its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 26%.
Legal closed 351 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 14 hours.
The Osaka office hosted 27 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 92 out of 100.
In March, the Platform team in Madrid redesigned the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 4%.

Section 4: Legal - Osaka

In February, the Platform team in Toronto audited its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 25%.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Support identified 8 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
The Madrid office hosted 17 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 78 out of 100.
Legal closed 390 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 8 hours.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $206,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Mobile closed 128 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 19 hours.
The Osaka office hosted 9 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 82 out of 100.
In December, the Support team in Madrid completed the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 16%.
In December, the Payments team in Osaka redesigned the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 28%.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $328,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $805,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Finance closed 105 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 7 hours.
The Osaka office hosted 6 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 71 out of 100.
In September, the Sales team in Chicago completed the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 11%.
In October, the Mobile team in Berlin reviewed its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 5%.
Support closed 89 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 12 hours.
The Madrid office hosted 28 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 89 out of 100.
In July, the Finance team in Singapore completed the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 7%.
A cross-functional review between Security and Sales identified 3 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
The Singapore office hosted 9 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 86 out of 100.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $253,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
The Chicago office hosted 20 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 72 out of 100.
In March, the Marketing team in Berlin automated the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 26%.

Section 4: Legal - Osaka

Mobile closed 332 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 18 hours.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $797,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $818,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
In November, the Legal team in Chicago completed the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 27%.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $370,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Finance closed 124 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 20 hours.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $291,000, in line with the plan for the year.
The Dublin office hosted 38 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 84 out of 100.
In December, the Data team in Toronto audited the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 4%.
Legal closed 333 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 20 hours.
The Dublin office hosted 37 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 93 out of 100.
In December, the Marketing team in Madrid audited the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 8%.
The Berlin office hosted 27 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 86 out of 100.
Sales closed 277 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 11 hours.
In February, the Payments team in Singapore audited the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 17%.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $403,000, in line with the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Security and Sales identified 3 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $581,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
The Berlin office hosted 5 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 78 out of 100.
The Dublin office hosted 36 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 83 out of 100.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $821,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
In September, the Payments team in Warsaw audited the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 4%.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $774,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
In October, the Sales team in Singapore consolidated the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 14%.
A cross-functional review between Security and Sales identified 4 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.
In December, the Legal team in Osaka consolidated the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 13%.

Section 4: Legal - Berlin

Spending on its tooling budget came in at $676,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Security and Sales identified 4 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Security and Marketing identified 5 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
The Madrid office hosted 30 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 91 out of 100.
In February, the Data team in Toronto audited its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 23%.
In March, the Support team in Sydney automated the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 6%.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $842,000, in line with the plan for the year.
The Singapore office hosted 27 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 79 out of 100.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $95,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Marketing closed 207 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 21 hours.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $555,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
In October, the Support team in Madrid migrated the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 11%.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $62,000, in line with the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Marketing identified 6 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
Marketing closed 69 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 22 hours.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $319,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Marketing closed 227 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 30 hours.
In December, the Platform team in Singapore completed the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 9%.
Finance closed 266 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 2 hours.
The Berlin office hosted 38 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 74 out of 100.
Finance closed 158 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 8 hours.
The Toronto office hosted 30 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 89 out of 100.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $814,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Support identified 6 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $753,000, slightly above the plan for the year.

Section 4: Sales - Dublin

A cross-functional review between Security and Legal identified 5 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Sales identified 11 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
The Singapore office hosted 7 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 95 out of 100.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $283,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
In July, the Support team in Singapore consolidated its onboarding process, which reduced cycle Facilities note: the Lisbon office lease ends on March 31, 2028. Renewal negotiations will start in Q3 2027.
time by 27%.
A cross-functional review between Data and Sales identified 7 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.
The Sydney office hosted 30 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 81 out of 100.
The Sydney office hosted 11 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 77 out of 100.
The Berlin office hosted 13 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 82 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Marketing identified 3 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $122,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Mobile closed 250 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 3 hours.
In September, the Support team in Singapore audited the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 26%.
The Austin office hosted 17 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 95 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Sales identified 4 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
In March, the Finance team in Dublin consolidated its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 26%.
Platform closed 219 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 12 hours.
Support closed 232 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 29 hours.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Marketing identified 7 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Finance identified 8 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Finance identified 6 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
The Berlin office hosted 36 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 93 out of 100.

Section 4: Support - Osaka

A cross-functional review between Data and Legal identified 10 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.
Security closed 250 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 13 hours.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Support identified 11 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
The Warsaw office hosted 5 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 96 out of 100.
The Madrid office hosted 18 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 74 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Data and Support identified 10 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Data and Marketing identified 10 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
In July, the Support team in Toronto automated its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 16%.
Data closed 308 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 7 hours.
The Sydney office hosted 8 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 79 out of 100.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $536,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Marketing closed 250 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 13 hours.
In August, the Legal team in Singapore audited the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 6%.
Security closed 345 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 3 hours.
The Singapore office hosted 19 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 73 out of 100.
Marketing closed 338 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 20 hours.
Platform closed 125 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 13 hours.
The Berlin office hosted 16 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 87 out of 100.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $54,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $531,000, in line with the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Legal identified 5 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.
Payments closed 139 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 19 hours.
Security closed 107 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 22 hours.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $269,000, in line with the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Data and Support identified 8 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $560,000, in line with the plan for the year.

Section 4: Mobile - Chicago

Finance closed 34 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 17 hours.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Legal identified 3 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
Data closed 220 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 20 hours.
The Sydney office hosted 29 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 93 out of 100.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $560,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
The Madrid office hosted 32 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 76 out of 100.
In June, the Security team in Singapore completed its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 28%.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Support identified 3 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.
Legal closed 135 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 26 hours.
Platform closed 394 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 4 hours.
Platform closed 395 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 27 hours.
Data closed 374 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 5 hours.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Support identified 11 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.
In February, the Mobile team in Chicago redesigned the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 23%.
In June, the Marketing team in Chicago redesigned the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 10%.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $49,000, in line with the plan for the year.
The Sydney office hosted 14 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 78 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Legal identified 5 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
Data closed 165 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 24 hours.
In June, the Platform team in Sydney reviewed the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 9%.
In June, the Legal team in Madrid expanded the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 14%.
The Berlin office hosted 23 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 79 out of 100.
The Chicago office hosted 24 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 89 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Finance identified 8 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.

Section 4: Payments - Dublin

Payments closed 360 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 16 hours.
Legal closed 308 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 14 hours.
In April, the Platform team in Toronto completed its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 16%.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Sales identified 2 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $753,000, in line with the plan for the year.
In October, the Data team in Chicago redesigned the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 7%.
In August, the Legal team in Berlin expanded the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 25%.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Finance identified 9 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Legal identified 7 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
Platform closed 150 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 5 hours.
The Sydney office hosted 11 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 77 out of 100.
Platform closed 221 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 27 hours.
In December, the Support team in Berlin completed the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 8%.
The Dublin office hosted 34 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 91 out of 100.
In November, the Platform team in Toronto audited the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 15%.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $629,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Legal closed 144 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 9 hours.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $559,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Finance closed 94 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 6 hours.
Mobile closed 360 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 27 hours.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $592,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $583,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $197,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Finance closed 385 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 19 hours.
In February, the Payments team in Osaka reviewed its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 18%.

Section 5: Platform - Sydney

The Osaka office hosted 20 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 90 out of 100.
The Singapore office hosted 29 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 85 out of 100.
Data closed 50 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 15 hours.
A cross-functional review between Security and Legal identified 8 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
Sales closed 337 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 16 hours.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $738,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Mobile closed 83 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 19 hours.
A cross-functional review between Data and Sales identified 9 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.
Finance closed 334 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 29 hours.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Sales identified 9 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Data and Sales identified 9 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Finance identified 2 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.
In September, the Marketing team in Singapore reviewed its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 16%.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $184,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
In May, the Data team in Singapore automated its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 10%.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $82,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $257,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Legal identified 6 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Finance identified 5 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $641,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Finance closed 344 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 7 hours.
In January, the Sales team in Toronto consolidated the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 4%.
The Chicago office hosted 9 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 92 out of 100.
The Madrid office hosted 39 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 79 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Data and Legal identified 6 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.

Section 5: Security - Osaka

Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $780,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
In September, the Marketing team in Sydney expanded the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 26%.
The Chicago office hosted 8 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 94 out of 100.
The Warsaw office hosted 27 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 96 out of 100.
In September, the Sales team in Austin expanded its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 14%.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Marketing identified 5 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Sales identified 5 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Data and Support identified 5 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.
In December, the Sales team in Warsaw expanded the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 6%.
The Chicago office hosted 39 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 78 out of 100.
Marketing closed 156 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 13 hours.
In August, the Mobile team in Singapore reviewed the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 20%.
A cross-functional review between Security and Sales identified 10 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
In June, the Legal team in Singapore expanded the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 12%.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $475,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
The Osaka office hosted 20 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 95 out of 100.
In September, the Payments team in Osaka redesigned its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 9%.
Payments closed 53 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 28 hours.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Legal identified 12 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
In February, the Marketing team in Dublin audited the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 15%.
The Sydney office hosted 20 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 87 out of 100.
The Berlin office hosted 9 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 95 out of 100.

Section 5: Security - Warsaw

Spending on its onboarding process came in at $336,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $109,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
The Berlin office hosted 20 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 82 out of 100.
In July, the Support team in Sydney completed the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 10%.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Marketing identified 2 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Sales identified 11 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
Support closed 112 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 9 hours.
In September, the Data team in Singapore migrated the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 10%.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $100,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
In April, the Marketing team in Warsaw completed its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 20%.
In March, the Mobile team in Berlin automated the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 13%.
Legal closed 239 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 29 hours.
The Toronto office hosted 17 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 88 out of 100.
In December, the Support team in Austin expanded its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 17%.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $306,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
In December, the Marketing team in Madrid automated its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 17%.
In October, the Payments team in Sydney completed the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 4%.
Platform closed 61 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 20 hours.
In May, the Finance team in Toronto completed its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 14%.
Support closed 203 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 3 hours.
The Warsaw office hosted 17 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 95 out of 100.
In October, the Data team in Singapore audited the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 7%.
Security closed 373 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 15 hours.
A cross-functional review between Security and Sales identified 5 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
In February, the Finance team in Osaka automated the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 17%.

Section 5: Mobile - Chicago

Finance closed 112 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 11 hours.
The Osaka office hosted 21 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 74 out of 100.
The Osaka office hosted 22 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 82 out of 100.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $437,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Data closed 240 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 29 hours.
The Osaka office hosted 12 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 71 out of 100.
Sales closed 297 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 18 hours.
Platform closed 118 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 7 hours.
Support closed 296 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 18 hours.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Sales identified 6 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Security and Sales identified 4 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $453,000, in line with the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Security and Marketing identified 2 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
The Sydney office hosted 30 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 72 out of 100.
The Sydney office hosted 36 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 87 out of 100.
The Toronto office hosted 4 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 81 out of 100.
In May, the Platform team in Dublin expanded its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 8%.
Security closed 156 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 25 hours.
In August, the Payments team in Warsaw completed the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 17%.
The Osaka office hosted 29 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 78 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Marketing identified 8 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $840,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $482,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $450,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Security and Support identified 6 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.

Section 5: Finance - Osaka

A cross-functional review between Security and Sales identified 8 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
The Singapore office hosted 38 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 75 out of 100.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $848,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
The Chicago office hosted 34 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 79 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Security and Sales identified 11 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
The Dublin office hosted 33 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 82 out of 100.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $135,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
In July, the Legal team in Osaka automated the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 5%.
In March, the Payments team in Warsaw expanded the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 27%.
Legal closed 284 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 20 hours.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Sales identified 6 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
In April, the Marketing team in Madrid automated the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 19%.
The Sydney office hosted 39 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 90 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Finance identified 6 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.
In April, the Finance team in Austin consolidated the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 23%.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $815,000, in line with the plan for the year.
The Chicago office hosted 23 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 84 out of 100.
In August, the Legal team in Austin expanded the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 26%.
Legal closed 171 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 19 hours.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $239,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Marketing closed 203 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 12 hours.
Legal closed 351 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 8 hours.
The Singapore office hosted 5 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 89 out of 100.

Section 5: Sales - Chicago

Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $288,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Security and Legal identified 12 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
The Dublin office hosted 35 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 80 out of 100.
The Berlin office hosted 36 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 90 out of 100.
The Austin office hosted 22 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 75 out of 100.
The Chicago office hosted 21 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 89 out of 100.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $609,000, in line with the plan for the year.
In March, the Mobile team in Singapore redesigned the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 16%.
The Singapore office hosted 40 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 74 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Security and Sales identified 5 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
Mobile closed 123 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 6 hours.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Legal identified 5 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
Legal closed 252 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 3 hours.
Finance closed 300 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 21 hours.
Legal closed 40 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 4 hours.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $178,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
In June, the Support team in Chicago automated its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 26%.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Legal identified 7 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.
The Berlin office hosted 20 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 77 out of 100.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $52,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $774,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $785,000, in line with the plan for the year.
The Singapore office hosted 12 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 71 out of 100.
In August, the Sales team in Chicago reviewed the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 25%.

Section 5: Data - Osaka

The Chicago office hosted 24 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 71 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Legal identified 5 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.
Marketing closed 362 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 20 hours.
In October, the Legal team in Berlin migrated its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 7%.
Legal closed 314 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 29 hours.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $49,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
In January, the Mobile team in Toronto reviewed its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 20%.
In October, the Legal team in Austin completed its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 9%.
Legal closed 44 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 16 hours.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Support identified 5 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $293,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Security and Support identified 10 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
In March, the Mobile team in Warsaw automated the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 3%.
The Berlin office hosted 38 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 75 out of 100.
Payments closed 389 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 20 hours.
The Chicago office hosted 38 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 95 out of 100.
Legal closed 33 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 29 hours.
In December, the Support team in Osaka reviewed the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 12%.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $720,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Mobile closed 151 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 12 hours.
In April, the Finance team in Osaka consolidated the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 7%.
A cross-functional review between Data and Marketing identified 3 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $490,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Marketing closed 303 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 6 hours.
The Austin office hosted 25 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 71 out of 100.

Section 5: Legal - Sydney

Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $141,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Sales closed 67 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 8 hours.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $635,000, in line with the plan for the year.
In December, the Mobile team in Singapore reviewed its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 21%.
The Madrid office hosted 10 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 94 out of 100.
In March, the Support team in Toronto automated the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 13%.
In September, the Data team in Warsaw migrated the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 9%.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Support identified 5 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
In November, the Payments team in Toronto consolidated its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 7%.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Sales identified 5 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
The Madrid office hosted 18 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 94 out of 100.
Security closed 121 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 30 hours.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $762,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
In January, the Support team in Singapore consolidated the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 7%.
A cross-functional review between Security and Legal identified 11 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
In November, the Finance team in Madrid consolidated its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 13%.
Finance closed 398 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 13 hours.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $608,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Legal closed 274 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 24 hours.
In November, the Platform team in Warsaw audited the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 7%.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $622,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $658,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
In June, the Support team in Dublin completed its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 24%.
Marketing closed 125 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 11 hours.

Section 5: Platform - Dublin

In October, the Sales team in Singapore migrated the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 7%.
In September, the Security team in Madrid expanded the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 18%.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $864,000, in line with the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Legal identified 7 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
Support closed 89 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 12 hours.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $823,000, in line with the plan for the year.
In June, the Support team in Austin completed its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 6%.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Sales identified 4 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
In June, the Marketing team in Singapore audited the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 4%.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Support identified 8 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Marketing identified 3 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Data and Sales identified 6 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
In February, the Payments team in Sydney redesigned the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 16%.
The Sydney office hosted 32 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 78 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Security and Sales identified 12 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
The Singapore office hosted 13 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 89 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Sales identified 4 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
In February, the Data team in Dublin reviewed the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 12%.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Legal identified 5 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
In January, the Support team in Austin migrated the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 5%.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $266,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Support closed 205 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 27 hours.
The Chicago office hosted 34 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 72 out of 100.

Section 5: Payments - Madrid

Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $341,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $382,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Marketing identified 8 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Data and Marketing identified 6 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
The Osaka office hosted 13 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 94 out of 100.
The Dublin office hosted 20 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 90 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Legal identified 2 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
The Berlin office hosted 36 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 84 out of 100.
The Chicago office hosted 6 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 93 out of 100.
In September, the Platform team in Chicago redesigned the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 20%.
Finance closed 267 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 11 hours.
The Osaka office hosted 35 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 77 out of 100.
The Toronto office hosted 21 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 92 out of 100.
In January, the Platform team in Warsaw completed the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 19%.
A cross-functional review between Data and Finance identified 11 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $542,000, in line with the plan for the year.
The Singapore office hosted 24 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 89 out of 100.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $254,000, in line with the plan for the year.
The Dublin office hosted 24 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 91 out of 100.
The Madrid office hosted 36 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 92 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Support identified 7 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.

Section 6: Mobile - Sydney

A cross-functional review between Data and Support identified 8 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
In March, the Data team in Austin redesigned its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 21%.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Legal identified 9 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $673,000, in line with the plan for the year.
The Warsaw office hosted 40 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 89 out of 100.
The Chicago office hosted 10 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 89 out of 100.
In September, the Sales team in Madrid completed its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 25%.
In December, the Marketing team in Osaka consolidated the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 21%.
In September, the Platform team in Toronto reviewed the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 7%.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $412,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Data closed 194 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 27 hours.
The Chicago office hosted 9 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 91 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Data and Marketing identified 7 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $469,000, in line with the plan for the year.
The Osaka office hosted 39 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 86 out of 100.
In July, the Platform team in Toronto audited its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 22%.
The Singapore office hosted 10 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 92 out of 100.
Platform closed 388 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 17 hours.
The Chicago office hosted 23 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 94 out of 100.
The Toronto office hosted 15 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 77 out of 100.
In April, the Platform team in Toronto automated the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 14%.
The Sydney office hosted 10 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 92 out of 100.
Sales closed 158 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 28 hours.

Section 6: Sales - Chicago

The Toronto office hosted 37 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 82 out of 100.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $214,000, in line with the plan for the year.
The Berlin office hosted 15 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 78 out of 100.
The Sydney office hosted 27 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 88 out of 100.
In August, the Payments team in Singapore expanded its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 14%.
The Madrid office hosted 5 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 72 out of 100.
In January, the Security team in Berlin expanded the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 6%.
The Singapore office hosted 7 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 77 out of 100.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $145,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $338,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $363,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Sales closed 112 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 15 hours.
Payments closed 369 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 9 hours.
Finance closed 115 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 23 hours.
The Berlin office hosted 12 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 96 out of 100.
In September, the Data team in Austin expanded its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 9%.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $339,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Legal closed 336 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 26 hours.
Mobile closed 277 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 15 hours.
In June, the Mobile team in Madrid completed the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 17%.
The Dublin office hosted 10 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 77 out of 100.
In April, the Security team in Berlin consolidated the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 24%.
Finance closed 269 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 4 hours.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $767,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
The Warsaw office hosted 27 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 94 out of 100.

Section 6: Marketing - Madrid

Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $190,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
The Berlin office hosted 12 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 93 out of 100.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $733,000, in line with the plan for the year.
In July, the Platform team in Austin consolidated its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 12%.
In February, the Finance team in Austin migrated the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 9%.
The Dublin office hosted 36 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 92 out of 100.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $616,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $146,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $168,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Payments closed 188 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 20 hours.
Security closed 94 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 4 hours.
A cross-functional review between Security and Legal identified 10 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Support identified 5 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
The Dublin office hosted 29 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 87 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Security and Legal identified 4 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Data and Finance identified 4 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.
Platform closed 278 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 21 hours.
In June, the Marketing team in Singapore migrated its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 5%.
Support closed 21 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 25 hours.
The Austin office hosted 22 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 90 out of 100.
Legal closed 284 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 16 hours.
Marketing closed 111 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 11 hours.
Payments closed 32 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 16 hours.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Sales identified 5 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $472,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
In January, the Data team in Madrid audited the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 10%.

Section 6: Support - Berlin

The Sydney office hosted 37 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 80 out of 100.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $710,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $856,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Legal identified 4 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
The Toronto office hosted 16 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 85 out of 100.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $174,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
The Dublin office hosted 28 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 74 out of 100.
The Chicago office hosted 22 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 75 out of 100.
In May, the Mobile team in Dublin migrated its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 20%.
In April, the Data team in Austin automated its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 11%.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Legal identified 9 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
The Austin office hosted 22 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 92 out of 100.
The Chicago office hosted 16 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 72 out of 100.
In March, the Support team in Dublin redesigned the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 13%.
The Warsaw office hosted 5 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 71 out of 100.
Sales closed 323 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 26 hours.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $209,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $593,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
The Madrid office hosted 35 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 86 out of 100.
The Warsaw office hosted 39 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 80 out of 100.
The Sydney office hosted 4 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 72 out of 100.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $148,000, in line with the plan for the year.
The Chicago office hosted 35 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 88 out of 100.

Section 6: Payments - Toronto

Mobile closed 144 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 22 hours.
The Austin office hosted 31 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 92 out of 100.
In April, the Marketing team in Sydney consolidated the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 7%.
The Warsaw office hosted 12 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 75 out of 100.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $717,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
The Berlin office hosted 5 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 86 out of 100.
The Singapore office hosted 12 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 79 out of 100.
The Austin office hosted 30 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 80 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Sales identified 5 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $460,000, in line with the plan for the year.
In June, the Data team in Warsaw migrated the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 19%.
A cross-functional review between Data and Finance identified 5 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $575,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Support closed 40 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 17 hours.
Finance closed 175 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 24 hours.
In October, the Legal team in Osaka reviewed the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 23%.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $494,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $461,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
In November, the Legal team in Toronto automated its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 27%.
Payments closed 177 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 18 hours.
In November, the Support team in Austin migrated its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 8%.
Finance closed 308 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 22 hours.
Security closed 192 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 14 hours.
The Singapore office hosted 19 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 76 out of 100.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $310,000, in line with the plan for the year.

Section 6: Platform - Madrid

Spending on its onboarding process came in at $425,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
In July, the Payments team in Austin audited the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 3%.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Sales identified 11 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
The Berlin office hosted 26 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 81 out of 100.
In October, the Legal team in Berlin consolidated the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 25%.
Security closed 33 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 15 hours.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $744,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $418,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
The Madrid office hosted 17 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 93 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Marketing identified 3 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $823,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
In July, the Payments team in Berlin reviewed its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 23%.
The Singapore office hosted 39 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 95 out of 100.
In December, the Security team in Singapore reviewed its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 19%.
The Berlin office hosted 34 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 96 out of 100.
Security closed 188 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 17 hours.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Legal identified 6 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
In December, the Security team in Chicago migrated its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 22%.
The Singapore office hosted 32 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 77 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Legal identified 8 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
The Sydney office hosted 5 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 75 out of 100.
In August, the Marketing team in Dublin redesigned the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 15%.

Section 6: Legal - Austin

In April, the Data team in Austin reviewed its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 5%.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $861,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
The Dublin office hosted 22 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 92 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Security and Marketing identified 3 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $484,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $459,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $313,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $824,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
In March, the Platform team in Madrid completed its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 5%.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $377,000, in line with the plan for the year.
The Warsaw office hosted 19 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 80 out of 100.
In October, the Sales team in Osaka consolidated the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 21%.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $659,000, in line with the plan for the year.
In December, the Payments team in Sydney expanded the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 17%.
In August, the Payments team in Singapore consolidated its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 7%.
In October, the Marketing team in Osaka automated the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 20%.
In February, the Security team in Austin consolidated its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 8%.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $245,000, in line with the plan for the year.
The Berlin office hosted 9 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 72 out of 100.
In April, the Sales team in Warsaw redesigned its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 18%.
The Madrid office hosted 38 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 88 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Data and Sales identified 2 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
In November, the Support team in Warsaw automated its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 8%.
Legal closed 329 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 11 hours.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $413,000, slightly above the plan for the year.

Section 6: Mobile - Toronto

Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $397,000, in line with the plan for the year.
In October, the Platform team in Singapore expanded the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 5%.
Finance closed 98 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 23 hours.
Support closed 133 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 30 hours.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Marketing identified 10 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $51,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Legal closed 131 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 10 hours.
The Warsaw office hosted 25 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 93 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Security and Sales identified 5 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
Marketing closed 55 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 27 hours.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $324,000, in line with the plan for the year.
In July, the Mobile team in Sydney migrated the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 9%.
The Austin office hosted 34 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 95 out of 100.
The Warsaw office hosted 19 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 92 out of 100.
The Dublin office hosted 16 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 75 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Security and Support identified 11 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.
Sales closed 205 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 24 hours.
Data closed 179 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 28 hours.
The Singapore office hosted 33 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 81 out of 100.
The Berlin office hosted 31 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 88 out of 100.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $231,000, in line with the plan for the year.
In August, the Security team in Warsaw consolidated the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 22%.
In October, the Finance team in Dublin audited its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 24%.
In March, the Security team in Singapore audited the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 21%.

Section 6: Data - Singapore

A cross-functional review between Payments and Support identified 12 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $378,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
The Madrid office hosted 18 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 74 out of 100.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $796,000, in line with the plan for the year.
In April, the Support team in Sydney audited its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 21%.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $431,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $404,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Security closed 264 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 14 hours.
Support closed 78 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 7 hours.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $212,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Sales closed 206 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 9 hours.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Marketing identified 7 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $748,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Platform closed 111 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 24 hours.
Sales closed 229 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 19 hours.
The Osaka office hosted 25 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 75 out of 100.
In December, the Marketing team in Sydney consolidated the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 20%.
The Singapore office hosted 23 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 82 out of 100.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $430,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Security and Legal identified 11 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
The Osaka office hosted 27 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 87 out of 100.
In December, the Support team in Berlin expanded its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 8%.
Payments closed 332 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 19 hours.
Data closed 378 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 29 hours.
Data closed 184 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 18 hours.
Finance closed 252 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 24 hours.

Section 6: Support - Osaka

Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $306,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Legal closed 76 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 19 hours.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $146,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Security and Marketing identified 2 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Security and Finance identified 6 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.
In January, the Finance team in Toronto automated the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 22%.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Marketing identified 5 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $166,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Security and Marketing identified 8 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $583,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
In June, the Support team in Toronto migrated the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 10%.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $683,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $545,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
In September, the Sales team in Austin expanded the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 20%.
In June, the Legal team in Chicago reviewed the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 20%.
The Austin office hosted 19 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 92 out of 100.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $590,000, in line with the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Legal identified 9 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
In May, the Platform team in Warsaw redesigned the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 5%.
Data closed 231 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 24 hours.
Sales closed 292 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 14 hours.
In September, the Payments team in Toronto audited the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 22%.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $188,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Security and Sales identified 12 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.

Section 7: Security - Toronto

Marketing closed 173 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 25 hours.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Legal identified 9 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
Data closed 187 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 11 hours.
The Warsaw office hosted 23 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 87 out of 100.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $691,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Data and Sales identified 7 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
Mobile closed 335 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 10 hours.
A cross-functional review between Security and Sales identified 4 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Security and Finance identified 4 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
In May, the Security team in Berlin completed its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 15%.
A cross-functional review between Data and Sales identified 12 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.
The Madrid office hosted 39 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 83 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Sales identified 11 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
The Osaka office hosted 36 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 95 out of 100.
The Sydney office hosted 28 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 92 out of 100.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $224,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Security and Sales identified 6 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
In August, the Data team in Madrid redesigned the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 23%.
The Toronto office hosted 17 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 78 out of 100.
The Singapore office hosted 15 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 91 out of 100.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $883,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Support closed 253 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 4 hours.
Data closed 194 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 10 hours.
Payments closed 306 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 20 hours.

Section 7: Finance - Osaka

The Berlin office hosted 35 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 96 out of 100.
Marketing closed 197 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 23 hours.
The Sydney office hosted 37 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 83 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Legal identified 10 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
The Austin office hosted 11 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 92 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Security and Sales identified 12 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
The Berlin office hosted 15 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 75 out of 100.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $87,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Data and Finance identified 9 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Security and Sales identified 11 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $651,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Marketing closed 315 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 22 hours.
The Warsaw office hosted 13 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 76 out of 100.
The Sydney office hosted 37 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 85 out of 100.
The Dublin office hosted 22 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 75 out of 100.
In April, the Platform team in Berlin migrated the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 23%.
The Singapore office hosted 28 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 87 out of 100.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $384,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $488,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
The Sydney office hosted 39 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 88 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Security and Support identified 5 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Security and Finance identified 2 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.

Section 7: Support - Austin

In January, the Payments team in Sydney completed its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 23%.
Security closed 33 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 22 hours.
Platform closed 126 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 19 hours.
In June, the Mobile team in Sydney migrated the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 12%.
The Toronto office hosted 15 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 95 out of 100.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $50,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Support closed 179 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 13 hours.
The Dublin office hosted 15 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 72 out of 100.
Platform closed 244 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 12 hours.
In March, the Platform team in Chicago completed the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 22%.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $123,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Legal closed 106 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 10 hours.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $279,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Payments closed 335 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 8 hours.
In October, the Marketing team in Sydney redesigned the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 26%.
In May, the Security team in Chicago completed the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 24%.
The Toronto office hosted 37 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 95 out of 100.
In April, the Marketing team in Sydney automated the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 15%.
Platform closed 224 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 14 hours.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $783,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Security and Finance identified 3 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.
Support closed 90 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 15 hours.
In March, the Payments team in Madrid completed its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 27%.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $611,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $93,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Marketing closed 306 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 20 hours.

Section 7: Legal - Sydney

A cross-functional review between Platform and Marketing identified 9 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $374,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $399,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
In June, the Support team in Toronto reviewed its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 4%.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Marketing identified 10 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
In January, the Platform team in Dublin expanded its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 8%.
Security closed 268 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 14 hours.
The Toronto office hosted 9 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 76 out of 100.
The Chicago office hosted 17 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 80 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Data and Legal identified 11 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
In November, the Sales team in Dublin completed the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 15%.
Sales closed 378 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 11 hours.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Marketing identified 10 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
The Osaka office hosted 30 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 95 out of 100.
The Madrid office hosted 23 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 74 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Data and Marketing identified 8 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $126,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $579,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
The Osaka office hosted 21 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 96 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Marketing identified 3 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
The Singapore office hosted 31 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 83 out of 100.
In May, the Security team in Osaka reviewed its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 28%.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $588,000, in line with the plan for the year.

Section 7: Payments - Singapore

A cross-functional review between Security and Sales identified 7 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $477,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
The Sydney office hosted 22 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 80 out of 100.
The Austin office hosted 14 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 95 out of 100.
In December, the Mobile team in Chicago consolidated the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 15%.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $843,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
In May, the Legal team in Warsaw redesigned the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 21%.
In September, the Security team in Berlin expanded the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 16%.
The Sydney office hosted 22 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 94 out of 100.
The Osaka office hosted 21 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 89 out of 100.
The Sydney office hosted 13 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 89 out of 100.
In February, the Support team in Toronto audited the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 3%.
A cross-functional review between Security and Marketing identified 12 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
Finance closed 291 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 11 hours.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $319,000, in line with the plan for the year.
In December, the Payments team in Austin redesigned the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 7%.
Data closed 191 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 29 hours.
The Sydney office hosted 17 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 79 out of 100.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $612,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Payments closed 235 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 25 hours.
The Madrid office hosted 25 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 84 out of 100.
Mobile closed 362 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 17 hours.
Data closed 324 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 23 hours.
In October, the Marketing team in Warsaw reviewed its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 14%.

Section 7: Security - Singapore

The Berlin office hosted 19 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 96 out of 100.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $698,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Security and Legal identified 6 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
In May, the Mobile team in Dublin migrated its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 4%.
In August, the Finance team in Madrid audited the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 18%.
Payments closed 169 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 21 hours.
Payments closed 35 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 6 hours.
A cross-functional review between Data and Support identified 6 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
Platform closed 311 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 20 hours.
The Chicago office hosted 24 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 85 out of 100.
The Osaka office hosted 5 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 71 out of 100.
Finance closed 376 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 5 hours.
In November, the Finance team in Singapore consolidated the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 23%.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $519,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
In October, the Mobile team in Osaka redesigned the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 12%.
The Toronto office hosted 29 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 95 out of 100.
Legal closed 393 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 19 hours.
Mobile closed 80 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 15 hours.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $840,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Data closed 250 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 2 hours.
In May, the Marketing team in Austin audited its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 5%.
A cross-functional review between Security and Marketing identified 8 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
The Madrid office hosted 23 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 93 out of 100.
In March, the Security team in Chicago migrated the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 17%.

Section 7: Sales - Berlin

A cross-functional review between Payments and Support identified 8 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
In July, the Legal team in Dublin completed its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 3%.
In April, the Marketing team in Austin redesigned its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 5%.
Legal closed 76 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 10 hours.
Finance closed 298 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 3 hours.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Sales identified 4 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Legal identified 7 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
In September, the Sales team in Singapore consolidated the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 17%.
In February, the Payments team in Osaka redesigned the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 5%.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Sales identified 7 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $408,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $315,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
The Warsaw office hosted 36 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 82 out of 100.
The Berlin office hosted 25 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 94 out of 100.
The Osaka office hosted 32 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 81 out of 100.
The Berlin office hosted 9 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 94 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Marketing identified 6 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $361,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $748,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $590,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Security and Support identified 6 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.
The Austin office hosted 33 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 79 out of 100.
In November, the Legal team in Madrid consolidated the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 5%.

Section 7: Support - Berlin

The Warsaw office hosted 18 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 73 out of 100.
In December, the Mobile team in Singapore reviewed the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 27%.
The Dublin office hosted 29 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 75 out of 100.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $519,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
The Warsaw office hosted 32 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 83 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Data and Legal identified 7 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.
In February, the Sales team in Singapore expanded the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 5%.
The Toronto office hosted 20 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 77 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Marketing identified 11 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Marketing identified 8 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
In May, the Platform team in Sydney completed its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 14%.
The Chicago office hosted 28 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 91 out of 100.
Payments closed 355 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 3 hours.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Finance identified 4 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
In December, the Mobile team in Toronto migrated the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 14%.
In February, the Mobile team in Sydney audited the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 11%.
The Warsaw office hosted 26 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 78 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Security and Marketing identified 5 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
Sales closed 253 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 10 hours.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Sales identified 4 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
In November, the Platform team in Chicago completed the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 23%.
In October, the Security team in Austin consolidated its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 22%.

Section 7: Finance - Sydney

In January, the Data team in Madrid completed the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 4%.
Legal closed 75 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 30 hours.
Security closed 302 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 13 hours.
A cross-functional review between Data and Finance identified 4 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
In April, the Security team in Austin completed its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 4%.
Data closed 266 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 18 hours.
In September, the Payments team in Austin consolidated its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 4%.
The Singapore office hosted 11 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 71 out of 100.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $854,000, in line with the plan for the year.
The Osaka office hosted 29 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 94 out of 100.
Sales closed 173 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 26 hours.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Support identified 11 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
The Singapore office hosted 8 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 75 out of 100.
Data closed 213 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 12 hours.
A cross-functional review between Security and Finance identified 5 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $297,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Data and Support identified 3 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
Legal closed 390 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 12 hours.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $650,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
The Austin office hosted 17 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 96 out of 100.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $724,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
The Chicago office hosted 38 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 83 out of 100.
Data closed 67 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 6 hours.
In July, the Marketing team in Austin expanded its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 8%.
Security closed 104 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 24 hours.
Mobile closed 358 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 4 hours.

Section 7: Security - Chicago

A cross-functional review between Security and Sales identified 4 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.
The Dublin office hosted 39 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 78 out of 100.
Security closed 61 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 8 hours.
In June, the Payments team in Dublin redesigned its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 9%.
The Warsaw office hosted 22 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 77 out of 100.
Marketing closed 142 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 20 hours.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Legal identified 11 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $234,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $352,000, in line with the plan for the year.
The Chicago office hosted 36 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 84 out of 100.
Finance closed 353 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 8 hours.
In July, the Finance team in Toronto expanded the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 22%.
A cross-functional review between Security and Sales identified 6 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
In June, the Security team in Dublin expanded the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 5%.
The Berlin office hosted 27 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 75 out of 100.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $873,000, in line with the plan for the year.
In June, the Security team in Chicago consolidated its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 15%.
The Madrid office hosted 12 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 86 out of 100.
Security closed 64 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 21 hours.
A cross-functional review between Security and Marketing identified 11 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
In December, the Platform team in Sydney automated the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 22%.
The Austin office hosted 36 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 85 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Finance identified 2 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.

Section 8: Payments - Toronto

Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $60,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $414,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $606,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Legal closed 249 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 11 hours.
A cross-functional review between Security and Legal identified 2 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
In December, the Mobile team in Warsaw migrated its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 9%.
Legal closed 65 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 27 hours.
The Dublin office hosted 21 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 89 out of 100.
In September, the Payments team in Osaka reviewed the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 19%.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $145,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Marketing identified 7 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
The Chicago office hosted 32 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 90 out of 100.
In August, the Mobile team in Berlin redesigned the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 6%.
In March, the Marketing team in Dublin audited its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 15%.
A cross-functional review between Security and Support identified 8 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
The Sydney office hosted 35 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 81 out of 100.
In July, the Legal team in Singapore completed its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 18%.
Mobile closed 203 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 30 hours.
The Warsaw office hosted 6 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 75 out of 100.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $873,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $292,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Finance closed 388 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 7 hours.
The Warsaw office hosted 11 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 75 out of 100.
Payments closed 273 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 3 hours.
A cross-functional review between Security and Support identified 5 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.

Section 8: Support - Dublin

The Austin office hosted 6 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 78 out of 100.
Marketing closed 246 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 7 hours.
In October, the Payments team in Austin audited the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 12%.
In April, the Sales team in Madrid expanded its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 27%.
Legal closed 240 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 6 hours.
The Sydney office hosted 35 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 91 out of 100.
In September, the Support team in Osaka completed the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 7%.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $838,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Data and Legal identified 8 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
The Singapore office hosted 36 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 78 out of 100.
Platform closed 280 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 28 hours.
In November, the Marketing team in Singapore reviewed its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 15%.
The Sydney office hosted 30 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 91 out of 100.
Legal closed 100 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 24 hours.
The Chicago office hosted 22 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 73 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Security and Marketing identified 7 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Finance identified 10 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
In June, the Support team in Austin audited the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 17%.
In October, the Platform team in Madrid migrated its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 19%.
The Berlin office hosted 28 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 73 out of 100.
The Osaka office hosted 5 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 78 out of 100.
The Sydney office hosted 34 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 93 out of 100.
The Dublin office hosted 34 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 84 out of 100.

Section 8: Legal - Madrid

In April, the Legal team in Osaka completed the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 23%.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $802,000, in line with the plan for the year.
The Singapore office hosted 34 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 77 out of 100.
The Dublin office hosted 14 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 72 out of 100.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $605,000, in line with the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Finance identified 4 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Data and Finance identified 6 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.
The Austin office hosted 21 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 79 out of 100.
In May, the Mobile team in Chicago audited its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 12%.
Support closed 69 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 8 hours.
A cross-functional review between Data and Legal identified 9 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
In June, the Data team in Sydney migrated the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 24%.
Support closed 318 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 17 hours.
Support closed 162 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 6 hours.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $619,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $718,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Data closed 72 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 25 hours.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $564,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $67,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
The Warsaw office hosted 31 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 72 out of 100.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $648,000, in line with the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Legal identified 8 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
The Warsaw office hosted 33 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 83 out of 100.
Data closed 344 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 6 hours.
The Austin office hosted 27 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 92 out of 100.

Section 8: Legal - Toronto

Platform closed 54 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 5 hours.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Support identified 3 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $61,000, in line with the plan for the year.
The Austin office hosted 17 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 92 out of 100.
Data closed 280 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 6 hours.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $609,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
In January, the Marketing team in Chicago redesigned the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 3%.
Marketing closed 299 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 21 hours.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Marketing identified 5 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
The Singapore office hosted 26 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 93 out of 100.
In August, the Support team in Berlin completed the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 4%.
In June, the Finance team in Osaka redesigned the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 5%.
The Osaka office hosted 5 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 90 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Data and Legal identified 2 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
In July, the Security team in Osaka completed the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 15%.
In March, the Platform team in Madrid completed the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 15%.
Sales closed 41 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 16 hours.
Payments closed 353 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 15 hours.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $668,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
In January, the Payments team in Austin consolidated the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 14%.
Legal closed 230 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 11 hours.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $402,000, in line with the plan for the year.
The Osaka office hosted 27 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 72 out of 100.
In February, the Finance team in Toronto expanded its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 17%.
The Dublin office hosted 7 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 78 out of 100.

Section 8: Platform - Dublin

A cross-functional review between Security and Marketing identified 4 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Data and Sales identified 5 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Legal identified 12 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
The Warsaw office hosted 33 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 95 out of 100.
In March, the Marketing team in Madrid automated its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 26%.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $851,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
In November, the Marketing team in Singapore migrated the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 6%.
Marketing closed 259 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 20 hours.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $528,000, in line with the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Data and Finance identified 3 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $708,000, in line with the plan for the year.
The Madrid office hosted 10 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 79 out of 100.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $722,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $229,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Data and Marketing identified 3 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
The Singapore office hosted 12 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 83 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Finance identified 2 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
The Sydney office hosted 30 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 79 out of 100.
Data closed 146 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 12 hours.
The Toronto office hosted 22 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 94 out of 100.
In September, the Payments team in Madrid migrated the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 26%.
Support closed 76 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 25 hours.

Section 8: Sales - Berlin

Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $52,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
In July, the Platform team in Osaka automated its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 23%.
Data closed 242 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 26 hours.
The Dublin office hosted 37 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 87 out of 100.
Legal closed 248 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 23 hours.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $103,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
The Osaka office hosted 18 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 83 out of 100.
Mobile closed 231 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 24 hours.
The Toronto office hosted 12 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 79 out of 100.
The Sydney office hosted 12 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 83 out of 100.
Data closed 50 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 25 hours.
Finance closed 50 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 18 hours.
The Singapore office hosted 36 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 81 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Security and Finance identified 8 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Support identified 6 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
In November, the Data team in Berlin consolidated its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 17%.
The Osaka office hosted 38 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 73 out of 100.
In November, the Legal team in Toronto completed its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 7%.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $846,000, in line with the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Data and Finance identified 8 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
In May, the Payments team in Berlin expanded its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 23%.
In June, the Payments team in Berlin audited the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 26%.
Sales closed 245 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 17 hours.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $614,000, slightly under the plan for the year.

Section 8: Finance - Madrid

The Dublin office hosted 13 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 74 out of 100.
In April, the Security team in Berlin migrated its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 17%.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $796,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
In March, the Marketing team in Dublin audited the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 9%.
The Berlin office hosted 5 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 79 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Legal identified 10 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
The Singapore office hosted 31 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 75 out of 100.
The Austin office hosted 20 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 93 out of 100.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $821,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $143,000, in line with the plan for the year.
The Warsaw office hosted 35 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 82 out of 100.
Legal closed 242 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 16 hours.
Sales closed 363 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 10 hours.
The Austin office hosted 26 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 83 out of 100.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $462,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $810,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Security and Sales identified 5 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
The Berlin office hosted 10 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 88 out of 100.
Mobile closed 276 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 24 hours.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $852,000, in line with the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Sales identified 5 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $291,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Legal closed 194 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 17 hours.
The Osaka office hosted 35 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 91 out of 100.
In February, the Data team in Osaka completed the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 19%.

Section 8: Support - Austin

A cross-functional review between Payments and Support identified 3 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
Payments closed 307 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 20 hours.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $361,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Legal identified 5 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
In April, the Legal team in Dublin migrated its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 5%.
In October, the Support team in Singapore reviewed its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 17%.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $584,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
The Sydney office hosted 6 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 92 out of 100.
The Osaka office hosted 18 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 87 out of 100.
The Austin office hosted 5 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 92 out of 100.
The Dublin office hosted 25 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 72 out of 100.
Payments closed 228 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 24 hours.
In February, the Legal team in Warsaw consolidated the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 5%.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Finance identified 9 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
In November, the Platform team in Singapore migrated the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 3%.
The Dublin office hosted 29 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 92 out of 100.
In January, the Data team in Chicago consolidated its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 7%.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Sales identified 8 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $670,000, in line with the plan for the year.
The Berlin office hosted 25 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 77 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Data and Legal identified 7 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Data and Support identified 9 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.

Section 8: Finance - Madrid

A cross-functional review between Platform and Sales identified 10 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
The Singapore office hosted 4 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 87 out of 100.
The Warsaw office hosted 32 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 82 out of 100.
The Madrid office hosted 12 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 82 out of 100.
The Chicago office hosted 22 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 84 out of 100.
In November, the Payments team in Warsaw completed its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 9%.
Payments closed 213 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 15 hours.
Security closed 236 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 17 hours.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Sales identified 7 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $544,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Finance closed 303 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 21 hours.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Marketing identified 3 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
In March, the Support team in Toronto completed its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 21%.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Support identified 4 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
In January, the Finance team in Osaka audited its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 12%.
Payments closed 251 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 16 hours.
Marketing closed 130 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 30 hours.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $445,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Marketing identified 9 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
The Sydney office hosted 6 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 71 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Data and Support identified 12 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
The Madrid office hosted 12 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 76 out of 100.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $856,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
The Sydney office hosted 5 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 86 out of 100.

Section 8: Security - Dublin

A cross-functional review between Platform and Marketing identified 10 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $235,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Security closed 208 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 15 hours.
The Warsaw office hosted 30 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 82 out of 100.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $557,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $486,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Mobile closed 390 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 14 hours.
Marketing closed 243 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 24 hours.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Support identified 11 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
Mobile closed 119 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 28 hours.
A cross-functional review between Data and Marketing identified 6 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
The Madrid office hosted 26 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 75 out of 100.
The Singapore office hosted 12 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 75 out of 100.
Finance closed 316 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 7 hours.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Sales identified 11 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
The Osaka office hosted 35 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 73 out of 100.
The Dublin office hosted 4 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 90 out of 100.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $609,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Data and Support identified 5 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Marketing identified 4 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $406,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Support closed 209 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 3 hours.
Finance closed 163 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 7 hours.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $373,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
In December, the Mobile team in Austin migrated the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 7%.

Section 9: Legal - Singapore

In January, the Sales team in Singapore audited the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 8%.
In July, the Payments team in Chicago reviewed the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 9%.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $373,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
The Singapore office hosted 22 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 92 out of 100.
The Dublin office hosted 29 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 79 out of 100.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $675,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Sales closed 149 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 29 hours.
The Warsaw office hosted 21 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 72 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Finance identified 10 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Sales identified 3 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $755,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Data closed 203 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 16 hours.
A cross-functional review between Security and Finance identified 10 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
Security closed 127 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 16 hours.
In July, the Payments team in Austin reviewed the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 6%.
The Toronto office hosted 25 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 71 out of 100.
In December, the Data team in Warsaw audited the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 28%.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Sales identified 10 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
The Austin office hosted 29 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 83 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Finance identified 2 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
In September, the Marketing team in Berlin reviewed the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 25%.
In June, the Mobile team in Sydney consolidated the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 20%.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Support identified 3 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.

Section 9: Payments - Dublin

Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $691,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Payments closed 189 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 8 hours.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Marketing identified 3 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $196,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $117,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $800,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
In May, the Finance team in Sydney migrated the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 10%.
In March, the Mobile team in Austin redesigned the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 9%.
Data closed 170 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 2 hours.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Marketing identified 8 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
The Dublin office hosted 33 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 81 out of 100.
The Chicago office hosted 4 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 88 out of 100.
In July, the Payments team in Warsaw expanded the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 5%.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Marketing identified 9 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Sales identified 12 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
In May, the Data team in Berlin audited the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 7%.
Sales closed 384 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 13 hours.
In May, the Support team in Dublin expanded its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 7%.
Support closed 74 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 12 hours.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Finance identified 10 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $294,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
The Austin office hosted 39 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 86 out of 100.
The Madrid office hosted 34 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 90 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Finance identified 10 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.

Section 9: Mobile - Osaka

Support closed 207 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 16 hours.
In August, the Mobile team in Dublin expanded the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 4%.
In December, the Mobile team in Madrid consolidated its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 14%.
Mobile closed 360 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 24 hours.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $618,000, in line with the plan for the year.
In October, the Marketing team in Osaka consolidated the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 20%.
The Sydney office hosted 20 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 95 out of 100.
The Madrid office hosted 36 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 79 out of 100.
In March, the Platform team in Austin migrated the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 27%.
The Singapore office hosted 7 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 71 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Sales identified 10 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $158,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $841,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Finance closed 91 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 12 hours.
In January, the Platform team in Dublin consolidated its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 14%.
The Toronto office hosted 34 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 94 out of 100.
In October, the Support team in Osaka audited the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 14%.
Mobile closed 267 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 8 hours.
A cross-functional review between Data and Marketing identified 11 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
In January, the Support team in Chicago automated the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 11%.
In June, the Mobile team in Toronto reviewed the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 13%.
In October, the Support team in Warsaw audited its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 17%.
The Singapore office hosted 37 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 93 out of 100.

Section 9: Legal - Berlin

A cross-functional review between Data and Marketing identified 10 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Sales identified 6 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.
The Berlin office hosted 32 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 85 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Marketing identified 6 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Marketing identified 8 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
The Chicago office hosted 16 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 70 out of 100.
Data closed 348 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 21 hours.
Legal closed 153 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 13 hours.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $697,000, in line with the plan for the year.
The Chicago office hosted 35 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 91 out of 100.
The Osaka office hosted 38 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 78 out of 100.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $467,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
In July, the Finance team in Singapore migrated its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 8%.
The Toronto office hosted 19 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 94 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Support identified 8 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Sales identified 4 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
In May, the Security team in Warsaw reviewed the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 27%.
In July, the Finance team in Berlin migrated the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 22%.
In March, the Sales team in Osaka audited the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 11%.
Support closed 275 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 20 hours.
In December, the Platform team in Warsaw completed the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 20%.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $545,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
In May, the Payments team in Madrid migrated the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 26%.

Section 9: Legal - Singapore

In September, the Sales team in Sydney reviewed the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 27%.
A cross-functional review between Security and Finance identified 7 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
Support closed 237 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 16 hours.
In April, the Data team in Osaka redesigned its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 20%.
In June, the Platform team in Madrid migrated its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 11%.
In August, the Platform team in Singapore completed the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 6%.
A cross-functional review between Data and Support identified 6 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
In June, the Security team in Austin completed the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 7%.
The Osaka office hosted 19 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 75 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Legal identified 6 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $379,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Finance closed 160 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 23 hours.
In July, the Data team in Warsaw consolidated the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 8%.
In October, the Payments team in Austin audited the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 17%.
In May, the Data team in Sydney reviewed the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 26%.
The Chicago office hosted 23 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 95 out of 100.
The Madrid office hosted 35 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 71 out of 100.
Mobile closed 396 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 16 hours.
A cross-functional review between Security and Finance identified 9 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
The Chicago office hosted 12 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 85 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Finance identified 5 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
The Singapore office hosted 35 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 85 out of 100.

Section 9: Security - Toronto

The Dublin office hosted 20 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 85 out of 100.
The Madrid office hosted 6 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 84 out of 100.
Finance closed 369 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 26 hours.
The Madrid office hosted 14 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 76 out of 100.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $381,000, in line with the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Marketing identified 10 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $90,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
The Madrid office hosted 31 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 90 out of 100.
Data closed 35 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 28 hours.
In October, the Mobile team in Chicago redesigned its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 27%.
Sales closed 197 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 29 hours.
In March, the Sales team in Chicago redesigned the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 14%.
The Toronto office hosted 38 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 86 out of 100.
Payments closed 290 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 3 hours.
A cross-functional review between Data and Marketing identified 4 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
The Osaka office hosted 36 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 92 out of 100.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $836,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $182,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Security closed 112 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 15 hours.
In April, the Platform team in Berlin reviewed the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 18%.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $631,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Security closed 306 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 20 hours.
The Warsaw office hosted 19 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 74 out of 100.
In December, the Sales team in Austin automated the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 23%.
Legal closed 67 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 28 hours.

Section 9: Mobile - Dublin

The Toronto office hosted 16 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 74 out of 100.
The Austin office hosted 14 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 78 out of 100.
The Warsaw office hosted 23 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 84 out of 100.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $321,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Platform closed 278 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 3 hours.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $227,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
The Berlin office hosted 27 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 77 out of 100.
In January, the Sales team in Chicago expanded the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 24%.
Sales closed 72 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 13 hours.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $431,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $327,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $750,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
The Osaka office hosted 15 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 95 out of 100.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $202,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
In August, the Data team in Toronto expanded the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 6%.
In April, the Legal team in Berlin automated its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 27%.
In May, the Mobile team in Berlin expanded the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 24%.
In November, the Platform team in Austin redesigned the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 20%.
Support closed 216 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 17 hours.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $535,000, in line with the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Legal identified 10 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $735,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
The Madrid office hosted 16 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 78 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Data and Sales identified 11 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.

Section 9: Data - Dublin

A cross-functional review between Mobile and Marketing identified 7 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
In July, the Mobile team in Singapore reviewed the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 28%.
In August, the Finance team in Austin automated its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 27%.
The Chicago office hosted 30 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 76 out of 100.
In April, the Legal team in Chicago reviewed the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 3%.
The Sydney office hosted 7 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 89 out of 100.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $229,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
The Chicago office hosted 39 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 93 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Security and Support identified 10 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
The Chicago office hosted 8 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 81 out of Project Falcon, the new fraud-detection system, has an approved budget of $1.35M and is owned by Priya Raman.
100.
In June, the Security team in Warsaw migrated its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 24%.
In April, the Mobile team in Sydney completed the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 20%.
A cross-functional review between Data and Support identified 6 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
The Chicago office hosted 8 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 77 out of 100.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $195,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $736,000, in line with the plan for the year.
In March, the Mobile team in Osaka consolidated its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 26%.
In December, the Data team in Dublin expanded its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 8%.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Finance identified 7 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $698,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
In December, the Mobile team in Berlin audited the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 7%.

Section 9: Support - Austin

A cross-functional review between Mobile and Sales identified 12 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
The Singapore office hosted 24 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 95 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Security and Marketing identified 7 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
In March, the Mobile team in Singapore expanded its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 12%.
In June, the Legal team in Berlin migrated the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 18%.
In July, the Platform team in Osaka consolidated the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 24%.
In June, the Platform team in Warsaw reviewed the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 27%.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Marketing identified 5 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Marketing identified 7 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
Marketing closed 210 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 6 hours.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Finance identified 4 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $81,000, in line with the plan for the year.
The Austin office hosted 27 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 84 out of 100.
The Sydney office hosted 29 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 83 out of 100.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $425,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Legal closed 128 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 17 hours.
Payments closed 103 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 9 hours.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Legal identified 6 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
The Warsaw office hosted 38 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 70 out of 100.
Finance closed 225 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 25 hours.
Mobile closed 98 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 18 hours.
Finance closed 98 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 27 hours.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Support identified 6 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
The Singapore office hosted 37 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 88 out of 100.

Section 9: Security - Singapore

Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $854,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
The Sydney office hosted 6 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 92 out of 100.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $498,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
In September, the Marketing team in Warsaw completed the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 3%.
In September, the Sales team in Warsaw audited the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 23%.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $679,000, in line with the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Finance identified 4 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
In August, the Data team in Madrid reviewed its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 13%.
Support closed 389 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 26 hours.
Finance closed 22 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 5 hours.
A cross-functional review between Security and Support identified 7 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $871,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $153,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Security and Sales identified 9 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
In October, the Payments team in Madrid redesigned the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 11%.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $762,000, in line with the plan for the year.
The Chicago office hosted 33 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 85 out of 100.
The Dublin office hosted 36 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 74 out of 100.
Finance closed 144 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 4 hours.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $829,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
The Austin office hosted 31 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 80 out of 100.
In November, the Mobile team in Toronto expanded the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 14%.
The Singapore office hosted 40 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 79 out of 100.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $558,000, in line with the plan for the year.
In September, the Security team in Sydney expanded its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 7%.

Section 10: Sales - Austin

Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $87,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $859,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Data and Support identified 4 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
In December, the Support team in Toronto consolidated the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 20%.
A cross-functional review between Data and Legal identified 11 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
Finance closed 271 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 14 hours.
In November, the Mobile team in Dublin expanded the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 10%.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $228,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Payments closed 69 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 6 hours.
The Dublin office hosted 5 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 81 out of 100.
The Singapore office hosted 23 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 81 out of 100.
In September, the Data team in Chicago migrated the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 23%.
The Toronto office hosted 32 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 71 out of 100.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $840,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
The Singapore office hosted 36 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 86 out of 100.
The Dublin office hosted 18 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 76 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Data and Support identified 9 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $60,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $85,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Payments closed 349 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 21 hours.
In July, the Support team in Sydney expanded the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 4%.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Marketing identified 10 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
Mobile closed 181 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 8 hours.

Section 10: Platform - Madrid

In August, the Mobile team in Sydney expanded its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 12%.
The Dublin office hosted 22 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 84 out of 100.
In January, the Platform team in Dublin automated its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 27%.
In June, the Sales team in Toronto migrated the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 18%.
The Madrid office hosted 28 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 94 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Data and Support identified 2 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
In May, the Mobile team in Singapore audited its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 11%.
In January, the Sales team in Madrid automated its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 27%.
In April, the Data team in Madrid migrated the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 9%.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $64,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Finance identified 3 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
Marketing closed 38 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 23 hours.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $792,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Finance closed 66 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 15 hours.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $441,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Mobile closed 385 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 24 hours.
In January, the Sales team in Austin expanded its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 20%.
In March, the Payments team in Berlin audited its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 4%.
Marketing closed 221 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 24 hours.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $236,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $189,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Marketing identified 10 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Marketing identified 6 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.

Section 10: Platform - Singapore

A cross-functional review between Platform and Sales identified 5 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $362,000, in line with the plan for the year.
The Austin office hosted 39 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 93 out of 100.
In February, the Mobile team in Chicago consolidated its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 3%.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Marketing identified 10 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
The Chicago office hosted 11 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 77 out of 100.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $807,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Finance identified 2 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
The Toronto office hosted 12 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 90 out of 100.
The Berlin office hosted 13 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 80 out of 100.
Payments closed 85 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 19 hours.
A cross-functional review between Data and Support identified 8 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $390,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
In December, the Legal team in Chicago consolidated the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 10%.
The Madrid office hosted 18 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 94 out of 100.
Platform closed 117 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 16 hours.
The Warsaw office hosted 34 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 89 out of 100.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $325,000, in line with the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Security and Support identified 5 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
In April, the Platform team in Toronto audited the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 20%.
In February, the Marketing team in Madrid migrated the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 24%.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $741,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Sales closed 94 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 8 hours.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Support identified 9 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.

Section 10: Support - Singapore

Marketing closed 88 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 26 hours.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $175,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Finance identified 8 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
The Austin office hosted 31 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 81 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Support identified 5 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $528,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $760,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $477,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
In January, the Security team in Berlin automated its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 5%.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Finance identified 12 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $264,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Legal closed 385 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 4 hours.
Platform closed 40 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 26 hours.
Platform closed 278 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 21 hours.
In December, the Payments team in Madrid completed the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 10%.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $274,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Security closed 86 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 11 hours.
The Chicago office hosted 15 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 81 out of 100.
Legal closed 280 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 3 hours.
The Madrid office hosted 6 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 88 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Support identified 4 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
The Madrid office hosted 4 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 74 out of 100.
Sales closed 123 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 21 hours.
The Singapore office hosted 17 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 92 out of 100.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $886,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
In September, the Mobile team in Chicago completed its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 13%.

Section 10: Marketing - Sydney

In July, the Finance team in Warsaw audited the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 7%.
In June, the Data team in Warsaw automated the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 23%.
A cross-functional review between Data and Legal identified 9 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Security and Finance identified 5 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
In November, the Support team in Austin completed the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 17%.
In January, the Marketing team in Warsaw expanded the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 6%.
Marketing closed 319 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 26 hours.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $94,000, in line with the plan for the year.
In September, the Finance team in Sydney audited its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 21%.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $629,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Finance closed 77 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 13 hours.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $70,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Sales closed 376 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 3 hours.
In November, the Sales team in Toronto audited the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 5%.
Marketing closed 210 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 5 hours.
A cross-functional review between Data and Support identified 5 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $381,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $377,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Security closed 63 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 7 hours.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Legal identified 5 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
Payments closed 320 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 24 hours.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Support identified 4 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $651,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $206,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Data closed 154 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 13 hours.
Mobile closed 81 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 19 hours.
Sales closed 293 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 3 hours.

Section 10: Support - Chicago

The Madrid office hosted 34 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 71 out of 100.
The Chicago office hosted 21 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 77 out of 100.
In January, the Sales team in Singapore completed its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 26%.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Support identified 11 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.
Support closed 264 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 2 hours.
In March, the Security team in Austin audited the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 21%.
A cross-functional review between Data and Finance identified 8 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $310,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Platform closed 164 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 20 hours.
The Dublin office hosted 34 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 74 out of 100.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $722,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
In February, the Mobile team in Dublin automated the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 23%.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Finance identified 8 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
Finance closed 227 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 7 hours.
The Dublin office hosted 16 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 94 out of 100.
The Singapore office hosted 33 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 96 out of 100.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $819,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Finance closed 135 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 9 hours.
The Warsaw office hosted 9 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 85 out of 100.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $224,000, in line with the plan for the year.
The Sydney office hosted 22 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 94 out of 100.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $878,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
In September, the Legal team in Osaka consolidated the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 9%.
In June, the Platform team in Toronto reviewed its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 11%.

Section 10: Legal - Dublin

In March, the Sales team in Madrid expanded the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 11%.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $175,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $874,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
The Warsaw office hosted 37 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 79 out of 100.
The Chicago office hosted 22 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 90 out of 100.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $840,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
The Austin office hosted 16 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 78 out of 100.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $843,000, in line with the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Data and Support identified 3 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
The Berlin office hosted 8 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 95 out of 100.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $449,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Finance closed 311 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 8 hours.
Support closed 194 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 18 hours.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $376,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Marketing identified 3 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Marketing identified 6 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
The Sydney office hosted 29 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 77 out of 100.
The Berlin office hosted 21 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 81 out of 100.
In December, the Security team in Austin redesigned the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 16%.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Sales identified 3 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
The Berlin office hosted 27 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 76 out of 100.
Mobile closed 139 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 10 hours.
The Berlin office hosted 12 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 96 out of 100.

Section 10: Mobile - Singapore

A cross-functional review between Platform and Support identified 9 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $91,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Support closed 378 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 9 hours.
The Dublin office hosted 10 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 71 out of 100.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $456,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Marketing closed 310 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 5 hours.
The Sydney office hosted 27 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 91 out of 100.
In May, the Marketing team in Madrid redesigned the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 18%.
The Madrid office hosted 32 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 81 out of 100.
Platform closed 153 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 13 hours.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Finance identified 9 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
The Sydney office hosted 6 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 71 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Sales identified 2 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $190,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
The Singapore office hosted 38 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 71 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Marketing identified 4 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
The Osaka office hosted 20 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 73 out of 100.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $810,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Finance closed 291 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 20 hours.
The Warsaw office hosted 26 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 88 out of 100.
In April, the Mobile team in Dublin audited the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 24%.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $850,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $272,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $867,000, slightly above the plan for the year.

Section 10: Mobile - Madrid

A cross-functional review between Security and Marketing identified 7 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Security and Sales identified 5 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $713,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
The Sydney office hosted 38 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 82 out of 100.
The Singapore office hosted 19 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 83 out of 100.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $472,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $464,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
In February, the Marketing team in Singapore consolidated the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 25%.
In July, the Sales team in Chicago migrated its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 18%.
In August, the Data team in Dublin audited the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 26%.
The Sydney office hosted 31 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 96 out of 100.
In September, the Sales team in Chicago completed the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 8%.
Mobile closed 237 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 17 hours.
A cross-functional review between Security and Support identified 5 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
In November, the Mobile team in Dublin completed its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 17%.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Marketing identified 5 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.
Platform closed 396 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 25 hours.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Support identified 3 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $232,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
In September, the Payments team in Dublin audited its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 26%.
In July, the Mobile team in Singapore audited its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 12%.
A cross-functional review between Security and Legal identified 7 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.

Section 10: Platform - Warsaw

A cross-functional review between Data and Marketing identified 7 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Support identified 2 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
The Singapore office hosted 7 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 95 out of 100.
In February, the Data team in Dublin automated the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 3%.
Sales closed 212 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 5 hours.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $433,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
In November, the Legal team in Sydney completed the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 28%.
Marketing closed 394 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 3 hours.
In February, the Sales team in Sydney completed its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 21%.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Support identified 2 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
The Warsaw office hosted 11 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 93 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Security and Sales identified 12 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $340,000, in line with the plan for the year.
The Sydney office hosted 16 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 84 out of 100.
In June, the Platform team in Osaka reviewed the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 8%.
Payments closed 396 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 12 hours.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Support identified 9 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
In February, the Data team in Sydney expanded its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 14%.
In May, the Data team in Dublin automated its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 18%.
The Madrid office hosted 38 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 91 out of 100.
Finance closed 321 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 20 hours.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Support identified 11 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.

Section 11: Platform - Osaka

A cross-functional review between Security and Sales identified 3 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $828,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Mobile closed 171 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 19 hours.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Legal identified 11 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.
In January, the Platform team in Dublin migrated the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 20%.
The Madrid office hosted 7 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 81 out of 100.
The Austin office hosted 6 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 89 out of 100.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $119,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $896,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Support closed 262 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 2 hours.
The Dublin office hosted 20 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 85 out of 100.
Mobile closed 344 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 19 hours.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $41,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
The Toronto office hosted 16 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 95 out of 100.
In June, the Legal team in Madrid migrated the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 13%.
A cross-functional review between Security and Legal identified 10 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
In July, the Legal team in Austin completed the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 8%.
In February, the Legal team in Toronto completed the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 27%.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $831,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Security closed 255 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 19 hours.
A cross-functional review between Data and Sales identified 9 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
The Toronto office hosted 40 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 90 out of 100.
The Osaka office hosted 23 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 82 out of 100.

Section 11: Platform - Chicago

The Berlin office hosted 38 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 83 out of 100.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $365,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
In October, the Finance team in Singapore automated its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 4%.
In October, the Marketing team in Dublin migrated the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 15%.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $317,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Security closed 284 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 13 hours.
The Singapore office hosted 12 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 91 out of 100.
Support closed 247 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 24 hours.
A cross-functional review between Data and Sales identified 3 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
In June, the Mobile team in Dublin expanded the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 13%.
Platform closed 22 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 24 hours.
Finance closed 110 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 23 hours.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Support identified 5 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Sales identified 5 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
In August, the Marketing team in Dublin completed its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 25%.
Legal closed 278 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 23 hours.
A cross-functional review between Data and Marketing identified 6 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $877,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $540,000, in line with the plan for the year.
In July, the Legal team in Singapore consolidated the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 19%.
The Chicago office hosted 12 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 71 out of 100.
The Toronto office hosted 21 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 76 out of 100.
In September, the Data team in Osaka audited its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 13%.
The Austin office hosted 16 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 87 out of 100.

Section 11: Mobile - Toronto

The Toronto office hosted 36 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 88 out of 100.
In May, the Support team in Singapore redesigned the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 20%.
The Sydney office hosted 25 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 82 out of 100.
In April, the Data team in Austin expanded its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 8%.
The Madrid office hosted 33 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 73 out of 100.
The Warsaw office hosted 22 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 96 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Data and Support identified 5 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
In December, the Data team in Osaka consolidated its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 6%.
In December, the Marketing team in Sydney redesigned the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 21%.
In May, the Payments team in Austin audited the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 8%.
Sales closed 393 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 14 hours.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $380,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $162,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $757,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Data and Marketing identified 2 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
Legal closed 215 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 5 hours.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Finance identified 4 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
Marketing closed 169 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 5 hours.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Legal identified 3 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
Finance closed 38 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 15 hours.
In September, the Marketing team in Dublin audited its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 27%.
In July, the Payments team in Austin reviewed the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 26%.
A cross-functional review between Security and Legal identified 6 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $773,000, slightly above the plan for the year.

Section 11: Support - Dublin

The Berlin office hosted 23 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 92 out of 100.
In September, the Sales team in Madrid completed the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 11%.
In June, the Platform team in Singapore automated the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 17%.
In December, the Support team in Austin reviewed its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 7%.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Legal identified 11 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
The Singapore office hosted 29 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 71 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Security and Sales identified 10 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Legal identified 10 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
The Dublin office hosted 25 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 88 out of 100.
In January, the Platform team in Madrid completed the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 16%.
Data closed 146 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 3 hours.
In November, the Sales team in Madrid reviewed its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 23%.
A cross-functional review between Security and Support identified 2 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
The Osaka office hosted 37 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 87 out of 100.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $774,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $653,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
In October, the Marketing team in Chicago consolidated the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 16%.
Finance closed 125 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 11 hours.
The Dublin office hosted 27 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 78 out of 100.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $221,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
In December, the Finance team in Madrid redesigned the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 10%.
In October, the Mobile team in Warsaw expanded the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 18%.
In August, the Data team in Osaka consolidated its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 15%.

Section 11: Marketing - Chicago

Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $862,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Marketing closed 239 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 14 hours.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $618,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Legal closed 93 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 6 hours.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $386,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $718,000, in line with the plan for the year.
In November, the Support team in Singapore consolidated the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 24%.
Mobile closed 115 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 15 hours.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $725,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Legal identified 10 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $520,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
The Osaka office hosted 16 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 85 out of 100.
Finance closed 212 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 12 hours.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $889,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Support closed 261 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 15 hours.
The Austin office hosted 29 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 70 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Sales identified 12 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.
In August, the Security team in Sydney automated its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 17%.
A cross-functional review between Security and Finance identified 2 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
In November, the Finance team in Dublin expanded the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 5%.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $803,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Mobile closed 49 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 18 hours.
Platform closed 82 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 19 hours.
In March, the Legal team in Warsaw automated its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 19%.
In January, the Finance team in Austin redesigned the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 15%.

Section 11: Mobile - Austin

In February, the Security team in Austin completed the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 5%.
In March, the Marketing team in Chicago automated the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 18%.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Marketing identified 9 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
In October, the Marketing team in Dublin expanded its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 23%.
In January, the Sales team in Berlin completed its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 15%.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Support identified 6 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
The Dublin office hosted 27 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 75 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Legal identified 3 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
The Singapore office hosted 37 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 77 out of 100.
The Chicago office hosted 33 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 72 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Data and Support identified 12 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $73,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Legal closed 258 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 17 hours.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $40,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $759,000, in line with the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Legal identified 3 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
The Madrid office hosted 11 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 80 out of 100.
Finance closed 171 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 9 hours.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $616,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Sales closed 275 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 13 hours.
Support closed 153 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 9 hours.
A cross-functional review between Security and Support identified 8 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.

Section 11: Platform - Warsaw

Platform closed 25 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 9 hours.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $762,000, in line with the plan for the year.
The Madrid office hosted 40 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 75 out of 100.
Security closed 327 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 13 hours.
In July, the Platform team in Warsaw audited the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 4%.
In January, the Sales team in Toronto redesigned the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 23%.
A cross-functional review between Security and Legal identified 3 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $551,000, in line with the plan for the year.
The Osaka office hosted 9 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 76 out of 100.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $114,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $723,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Security and Legal identified 12 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.
The Osaka office hosted 16 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 89 out of 100.
In May, the Support team in Singapore audited its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 15%.
A cross-functional review between Data and Marketing identified 12 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $407,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
The Austin office hosted 12 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 76 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Sales identified 8 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
The Toronto office hosted 10 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 90 out of 100.
In October, the Support team in Singapore automated the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 13%.
The Berlin office hosted 25 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 71 out of 100.
In January, the Finance team in Berlin automated the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 26%.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $841,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
In March, the Finance team in Berlin reviewed the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 13%.

Section 11: Mobile - Chicago

Support closed 331 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 23 hours.
Finance closed 228 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 8 hours.
Legal closed 85 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 21 hours.
The Osaka office hosted 12 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 95 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Sales identified 2 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $732,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Support identified 3 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $760,000, in line with the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Security and Legal identified 12 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
The Berlin office hosted 28 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 93 out of 100.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $744,000, in line with the plan for the year.
In October, the Platform team in Austin reviewed the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 21%.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $352,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Support identified 6 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Legal identified 6 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
Data closed 156 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 28 hours.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Legal identified 8 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
In March, the Support team in Warsaw expanded the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 6%.
A cross-functional review between Data and Sales identified 6 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
Marketing closed 295 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 26 hours.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $398,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Support identified 8 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
Mobile closed 286 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 13 hours.
In September, the Finance team in Dublin automated its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 28%.
In February, the Support team in Osaka expanded its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 9%.

Section 11: Security - Sydney

Data closed 296 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 16 hours.
Security closed 371 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 11 hours.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Marketing identified 2 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
In September, the Security team in Madrid audited the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 24%.
Security closed 205 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 17 hours.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Finance identified 3 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
In August, the Sales team in Warsaw redesigned its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 14%.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $257,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $425,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
In July, the Platform team in Dublin consolidated the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 26%.
In July, the Marketing team in Warsaw consolidated the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 17%.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Sales identified 5 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
The Berlin office hosted 4 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 75 out of 100.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $180,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
The Toronto office hosted 37 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 76 out of 100.
The Madrid office hosted 8 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 76 out of 100.
Security closed 241 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 10 hours.
In May, the Marketing team in Madrid consolidated the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 18%.
Data closed 363 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 29 hours.
In December, the Marketing team in Sydney completed the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 23%.
In May, the Finance team in Austin automated its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 13%.
Support closed 149 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 30 hours.
In July, the Payments team in Warsaw audited the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 20%.
In August, the Security team in Singapore redesigned the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 6%.

Section 11: Legal - Osaka

Security closed 356 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 9 hours.
Security closed 44 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 3 hours.
In July, the Mobile team in Osaka audited the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 8%.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $748,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
The Berlin office hosted 10 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 88 out of 100.
Data closed 267 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 23 hours.
A cross-functional review between Data and Marketing identified 8 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
Data closed 344 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 23 hours.
A cross-functional review between Security and Legal identified 4 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
In June, the Platform team in Austin audited the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 16%.
In June, the Data team in Singapore audited its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 20%.
In December, the Security team in Berlin redesigned the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 18%.
In October, the Sales team in Madrid completed the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 23%.
In December, the Platform team in Madrid migrated its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 19%.
In June, the Platform team in Singapore completed the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 11%.
The Toronto office hosted 12 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 90 out of 100.
Data closed 350 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 27 hours.
Mobile closed 60 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 15 hours.
A cross-functional review between Data and Support identified 7 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Security and Support identified 4 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
In September, the Support team in Sydney redesigned its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 19%.
A cross-functional review between Security and Finance identified 9 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Security and Support identified 3 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
In April, the Payments team in Dublin redesigned its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 28%.

Section 12: Data - Singapore

Platform closed 112 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 13 hours.
The Austin office hosted 35 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 85 out of 100.
Platform closed 149 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 10 hours.
Security closed 394 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 11 hours.
The Chicago office hosted 20 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 78 out of 100.
In April, the Payments team in Madrid expanded the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 22%.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $67,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Legal identified 11 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
Finance closed 79 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 6 hours.
Platform closed 338 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 22 hours.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Support identified 8 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
Legal closed 27 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 24 hours.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $208,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
The Chicago office hosted 25 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 85 out of 100.
The Singapore office hosted 7 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 72 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Data and Sales identified 8 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
Platform closed 201 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 17 hours.
Sales closed 333 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 27 hours.
The Sydney office hosted 35 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 85 out of 100.
In August, the Payments team in Sydney expanded its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 24%.
In December, the Payments team in Warsaw reviewed its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 13%.
A cross-functional review between Security and Marketing identified 5 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
The Chicago office hosted 5 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 94 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Data and Legal identified 5 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $153,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
In January, the Sales team in Austin redesigned its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 21%.

Section 12: Data - Dublin

A cross-functional review between Payments and Sales identified 7 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
The Chicago office hosted 7 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 89 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Marketing identified 10 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $187,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
The Warsaw office hosted 32 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 80 out of 100.
The Toronto office hosted 38 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 82 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Data and Support identified 5 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
Mobile closed 48 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 14 hours.
In February, the Security team in Dublin audited the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 8%.
In December, the Sales team in Warsaw completed the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 19%.
Finance closed 92 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 24 hours.
A cross-functional review between Data and Support identified 6 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
Data closed 389 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 27 hours.
In September, the Support team in Austin automated the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 9%.
In July, the Support team in Austin audited the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 19%.
Payments closed 43 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 18 hours.
In August, the Platform team in Berlin audited the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 27%.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Legal identified 7 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
The Singapore office hosted 29 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 89 out of 100.
Security closed 36 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 13 hours.
In April, the Sales team in Toronto audited its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 4%.
The Chicago office hosted 28 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 72 out of 100.
The Austin office hosted 35 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 93 out of 100.

Section 12: Marketing - Berlin

Security closed 51 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 4 hours.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Finance identified 5 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $422,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Data closed 394 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 6 hours.
A cross-functional review between Security and Marketing identified 10 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
In October, the Sales team in Berlin reviewed its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 27%.
In January, the Legal team in Osaka completed the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 15%.
In August, the Finance team in Berlin automated the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 4%.
Sales closed 218 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 3 hours.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $515,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Finance closed 75 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 8 hours.
The Berlin office hosted 11 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 79 out of 100.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $135,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $760,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Mobile closed 105 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 6 hours.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $228,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
The Berlin office hosted 38 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 93 out of 100.
In April, the Finance team in Dublin migrated the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 6%.
Finance closed 388 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 7 hours.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Sales identified 11 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $782,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $147,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
In February, the Platform team in Dublin consolidated its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 26%.
In December, the Payments team in Singapore audited the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 14%.

Section 12: Data - Berlin

Spending on the internal training program came in at $128,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Platform closed 70 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 23 hours.
Security closed 162 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 16 hours.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $309,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
The Osaka office hosted 30 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 93 out of 100.
The Madrid office hosted 24 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 80 out of 100.
Mobile closed 340 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 24 hours.
Finance closed 237 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 24 hours.
A cross-functional review between Security and Legal identified 7 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
The Madrid office hosted 12 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 76 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Sales identified 9 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.
The Singapore office hosted 23 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 74 out of 100.
In October, the Legal team in Osaka redesigned its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 25%.
In May, the Platform team in Sydney consolidated the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 21%.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $231,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
The Toronto office hosted 33 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 93 out of 100.
Mobile closed 218 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 6 hours.
In April, the Payments team in Osaka redesigned the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 26%.
Data closed 353 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 4 hours.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $60,000, in line with the plan for the year.
In September, the Sales team in Warsaw redesigned the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 23%.
The Warsaw office hosted 5 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 86 out of 100.
In December, the Security team in Sydney redesigned the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 26%.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Legal identified 9 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.

Section 12: Mobile - Berlin

The Berlin office hosted 16 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 93 out of 100.
Mobile closed 75 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 11 hours.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $171,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $106,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Marketing closed 364 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 11 hours.
A cross-functional review between Security and Legal identified 5 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
Marketing closed 350 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 30 hours.
The Osaka office hosted 39 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 90 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Marketing identified 8 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
The Osaka office hosted 10 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 71 out of 100.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $294,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
The Madrid office hosted 37 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 93 out of 100.
In September, the Security team in Osaka reviewed its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 18%.
In December, the Finance team in Austin audited the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 28%.
In February, the Finance team in Osaka redesigned its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 8%.
A cross-functional review between Security and Finance identified 5 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $788,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
In August, the Marketing team in Dublin redesigned the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 3%.
The Toronto office hosted 20 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 71 out of 100.
Sales closed 209 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 8 hours.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Finance identified 11 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
The Dublin office hosted 38 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 92 out of 100.
In June, the Security team in Osaka completed the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 17%.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Legal identified 9 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.

Section 12: Payments - Warsaw

Marketing closed 326 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 10 hours.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $65,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $474,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Support closed 98 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 27 hours.
Support closed 145 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 7 hours.
The Madrid office hosted 36 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 83 out of 100.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $634,000, in line with the plan for the year.
In March, the Finance team in Toronto migrated its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 7%.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $273,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
In October, the Security team in Dublin audited the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 25%.
In July, the Support team in Osaka completed the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 8%.
Sales closed 147 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 6 hours.
In February, the Marketing team in Berlin automated its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 17%.
Mobile closed 144 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 6 hours.
Support closed 58 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 14 hours.
The Singapore office hosted 27 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 76 out of 100.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $676,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Security and Sales identified 2 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
In October, the Mobile team in Berlin reviewed its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 23%.
In February, the Platform team in Madrid redesigned its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 12%.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $172,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
In April, the Support team in Warsaw automated the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 15%.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Sales identified 10 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Security and Support identified 11 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Sales identified 12 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.

Section 12: Mobile - Dublin

Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $360,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Platform closed 209 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 17 hours.
The Berlin office hosted 30 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 93 out of 100.
The Dublin office hosted 20 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 83 out of 100.
The Singapore office hosted 29 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 71 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Sales identified 5 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
In August, the Security team in Osaka expanded its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 19%.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Support identified 10 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
In July, the Finance team in Warsaw completed the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 14%.
The Dublin office hosted 38 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 80 out of 100.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $430,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Security closed 84 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 13 hours.
The Singapore office hosted 17 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 74 out of 100.
Finance closed 188 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 15 hours.
In April, the Mobile team in Austin reviewed its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 3%.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $825,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $413,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Finance closed 318 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 18 hours.
The Austin office hosted 39 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 95 out of 100.
The Chicago office hosted 5 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 96 out of 100.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $179,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
In May, the Security team in Madrid completed the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 15%.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $178,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
The Toronto office hosted 38 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 85 out of 100.

Section 12: Marketing - Warsaw

Legal closed 126 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 25 hours.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $726,000, in line with the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Data and Support identified 5 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
In June, the Sales team in Berlin reviewed the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 10%.
The Sydney office hosted 26 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 71 out of 100.
In February, the Legal team in Dublin completed the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 20%.
The Madrid office hosted 18 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 74 out of 100.
The Austin office hosted 7 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 85 out of 100.
The Warsaw office hosted 7 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 82 out of 100.
The Berlin office hosted 9 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 92 out of 100.
The Toronto office hosted 24 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 77 out of 100.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $531,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
The Singapore office hosted 5 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 86 out of 100.
The Madrid office hosted 28 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 73 out of 100.
In December, the Data team in Madrid redesigned the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 14%.
In August, the Platform team in Singapore automated the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 14%.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Legal identified 4 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
Payments closed 120 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 24 hours.
In January, the Legal team in Chicago reviewed the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 3%.
Mobile closed 332 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 27 hours.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $649,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
The Warsaw office hosted 36 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 91 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Security and Sales identified 8 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.

Section 12: Support - Madrid

A cross-functional review between Platform and Support identified 9 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Data and Legal identified 4 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $636,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $835,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $98,000, in line with the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Legal identified 10 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $213,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
The Austin office hosted 31 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 93 out of 100.
In May, the Platform team in Chicago completed the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 25%.
A cross-functional review between Data and Support identified 10 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
Legal closed 132 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 20 hours.
The Madrid office hosted 25 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 76 out of 100.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $258,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $550,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Mobile closed 173 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 3 hours.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $366,000, in line with the plan for the year.
The Singapore office hosted 31 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 75 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Security and Marketing identified 8 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
Support closed 376 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 14 hours.
In July, the Data team in Chicago migrated the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 9%.
The Sydney office hosted 8 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 92 out of 100.
In June, the Security team in Sydney audited the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 5%.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Legal identified 6 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.
In December, the Legal team in Dublin expanded the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 24%.

Section 12: Sales - Toronto

In February, the Data team in Madrid migrated the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 6%.
The Austin office hosted 39 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 86 out of 100.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $241,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $824,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $400,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Sales closed 254 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 3 hours.
In January, the Payments team in Warsaw expanded the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 27%.
Mobile closed 87 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 29 hours.
The Berlin office hosted 30 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 82 out of 100.
The Austin office hosted 19 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 94 out of 100.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $521,000, in line with the plan for the year.
The Sydney office hosted 29 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 74 out of 100.
The Madrid office hosted 12 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 83 out of 100.
Finance closed 135 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 6 hours.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Marketing identified 4 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $632,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
In July, the Security team in Chicago redesigned the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 23%.
In December, the Payments team in Austin automated its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 14%.
Finance closed 222 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 17 hours.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $199,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
The Dublin office hosted 35 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 82 out of 100.
In April, the Sales team in Osaka consolidated its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 12%.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $141,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $702,000, slightly under the plan for the year.

Section 13: Security - Warsaw

Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $228,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Security closed 338 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 5 hours.
The Chicago office hosted 30 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 74 out of 100.
In December, the Marketing team in Dublin audited the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 10%.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $214,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $190,000, in line with the plan for the year.
The Madrid office hosted 28 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 84 out of 100.
Sales closed 126 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 8 hours.
Data closed 271 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 4 hours.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $494,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $340,000, in line with the plan for the year.
In January, the Payments team in Madrid expanded its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 23%.
The Osaka office hosted 5 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 90 out of 100.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $393,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $517,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Platform closed 214 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 21 hours.
Support closed 223 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 23 hours.
In June, the Mobile team in Austin reviewed its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 10%.
The Dublin office hosted 26 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 87 out of 100.
In January, the Legal team in Sydney reviewed the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 17%.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Marketing identified 11 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Sales identified 6 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
Legal closed 374 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 27 hours.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $84,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
The Austin office hosted 20 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 80 out of 100.
In May, the Mobile team in Dublin completed the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 21%.

Section 13: Support - Sydney

Platform closed 174 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 24 hours.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $828,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Legal identified 11 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
In August, the Finance team in Singapore consolidated its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 10%.
In March, the Sales team in Madrid redesigned the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 4%.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Support identified 8 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
Legal closed 349 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 20 hours.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $607,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
The Osaka office hosted 33 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 85 out of 100.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $177,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Security and Sales identified 8 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
Data closed 271 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 19 hours.
Payments closed 178 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 8 hours.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Legal identified 7 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
The Osaka office hosted 29 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 79 out of 100.
In September, the Data team in Toronto migrated the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 4%.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $878,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
The Osaka office hosted 7 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 91 out of 100.
The Toronto office hosted 7 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 88 out of 100.
In July, the Finance team in Osaka migrated the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 25%.
A cross-functional review between Data and Support identified 7 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.
The Warsaw office hosted 13 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 71 out of 100.
Mobile closed 284 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 13 hours.

Section 13: Data - Toronto

A cross-functional review between Data and Finance identified 2 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
Payments closed 158 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 30 hours.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $488,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $886,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
The Madrid office hosted 6 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 84 out of 100.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $410,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
In February, the Marketing team in Toronto completed the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 21%.
The Toronto office hosted 32 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 96 out of 100.
The Toronto office hosted 28 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 80 out of 100.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $539,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Payments closed 242 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 12 hours.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Legal identified 11 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
Support closed 332 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 20 hours.
Data closed 112 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 27 hours.
The Warsaw office hosted 20 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 91 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Sales identified 5 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
The Madrid office hosted 30 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 81 out of 100.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $796,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Platform closed 156 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 4 hours.
In June, the Security team in Osaka redesigned the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 16%.
A cross-functional review between Data and Finance identified 6 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
Marketing closed 95 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 29 hours.
In February, the Finance team in Madrid migrated its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 15%.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $460,000, slightly above the plan for the year.

Section 13: Mobile - Austin

A cross-functional review between Security and Marketing identified 3 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Data and Marketing identified 4 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $742,000, in line with the plan for the year.
The Singapore office hosted 22 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 96 out of 100.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $708,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
In February, the Support team in Dublin redesigned its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 26%.
The Austin office hosted 25 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 75 out of 100.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $277,000, in line with the plan for the year.
The Toronto office hosted 6 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 75 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Data and Sales identified 11 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
The Chicago office hosted 34 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 94 out of 100.
The Singapore office hosted 24 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 75 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Sales identified 4 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.
The Chicago office hosted 17 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 95 out of 100.
The Dublin office hosted 7 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 89 out of 100.
Payments closed 178 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 20 hours.
Mobile closed 396 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 11 hours.
Platform closed 243 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 24 hours.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $528,000, in line with the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Data and Marketing identified 11 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
Platform closed 105 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 30 hours.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Finance identified 11 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.

Section 13: Platform - Austin

Marketing closed 367 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 18 hours.
In December, the Sales team in Berlin completed its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 24%.
Platform closed 99 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 26 hours.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $393,000, in line with the plan for the year.
In September, the Platform team in Warsaw redesigned its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 27%.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $170,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
The Dublin office hosted 23 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 89 out of 100.
The Dublin office hosted 27 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 74 out of 100.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $318,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $658,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
In September, the Mobile team in Sydney expanded the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 14%.
In January, the Sales team in Austin expanded its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 4%.
Marketing closed 131 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 24 hours.
In January, the Support team in Dublin redesigned the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 3%.
The Osaka office hosted 11 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 79 out of 100.
In April, the Support team in Berlin redesigned the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 8%.
In March, the Marketing team in Dublin consolidated the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 20%.
The Sydney office hosted 15 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 87 out of 100.
The Austin office hosted 39 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 94 out of 100.
The Austin office hosted 22 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 80 out of 100.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $143,000, in line with the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Data and Legal identified 11 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
Security closed 249 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 6 hours.
Payments closed 384 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 30 hours.

Section 13: Legal - Sydney

In January, the Security team in Sydney reviewed its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 16%.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $391,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Support identified 11 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $116,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $769,000, in line with the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Security and Sales identified 10 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Legal identified 10 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
Support closed 96 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 28 hours.
Marketing closed 311 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 4 hours.
A cross-functional review between Security and Sales identified 2 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
In May, the Data team in Chicago consolidated its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 22%.
Payments closed 254 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 11 hours.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $167,000, in line with the plan for the year.
The Warsaw office hosted 17 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 89 out of 100.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $836,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Marketing closed 26 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 23 hours.
Marketing closed 63 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 11 hours.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $64,000, in line with the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Sales identified 6 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
In January, the Mobile team in Dublin automated the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 17%.
Sales closed 105 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 12 hours.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $269,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Data and Finance identified 12 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $875,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
The Madrid office hosted 13 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 74 out of 100.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $160,000, in line with the plan for the year.

Section 13: Sales - Toronto

Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $382,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Marketing closed 87 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 19 hours.
The Dublin office hosted 29 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 73 out of 100.
Legal closed 197 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 9 hours.
Support closed 182 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 16 hours.
A cross-functional review between Data and Sales identified 6 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
The Berlin office hosted 5 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 87 out of 100.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $377,000, in line with the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Legal identified 6 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Sales identified 5 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $825,000, in line with the plan for the year.
The Toronto office hosted 17 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 80 out of 100.
In February, the Legal team in Madrid reviewed its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 23%.
Platform closed 141 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 22 hours.
The Toronto office hosted 16 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 79 out of 100.
In August, the Mobile team in Sydney redesigned the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 17%.
The Toronto office hosted 12 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 77 out of 100.
The Singapore office hosted 31 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 93 out of 100.
In July, the Sales team in Austin expanded the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 12%.
In January, the Payments team in Dublin automated its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 15%.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Finance identified 7 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Marketing identified 9 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $73,000, slightly above the plan for the year.

Section 13: Payments - Dublin

The Singapore office hosted 13 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 83 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Security and Legal identified 3 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
Payments closed 23 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 21 hours.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Finance identified 4 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Data and Finance identified 6 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
Support closed 353 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 22 hours.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $850,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
In February, the Finance team in Warsaw completed the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 15%.
The Toronto office hosted 38 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 80 out of 100.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $678,000, in line with the plan for the year.
In February, the Marketing team in Sydney audited its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 23%.
The Osaka office hosted 30 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 74 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Security and Marketing identified 3 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
Finance closed 392 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 19 hours.
In November, the Legal team in Singapore reviewed its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 20%.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $695,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Security closed 206 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 23 hours.
Sales closed 81 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 14 hours.
Finance closed 158 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 11 hours.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Sales identified 9 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $291,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Payments closed 312 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 2 hours.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $206,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Data closed 193 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 2 hours.
Data closed 26 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 5 hours.
The Toronto office hosted 20 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 80 out of 100.

Section 13: Marketing - Sydney

In January, the Sales team in Osaka migrated its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 21%.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $459,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Finance closed 139 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 15 hours.
In January, the Legal team in Singapore redesigned the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 23%.
In August, the Sales team in Chicago migrated the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 7%.
In July, the Payments team in Sydney reviewed the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 7%.
The Warsaw office hosted 15 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 80 out of 100.
Legal closed 140 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 24 hours.
A cross-functional review between Data and Finance identified 12 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
The Dublin office hosted 31 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 90 out of 100.
In December, the Security team in Berlin consolidated the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 24%.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $200,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Sales closed 242 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 16 hours.
The Osaka office hosted 37 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 81 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Security and Support identified 10 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
The Osaka office hosted 34 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 86 out of 100.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $837,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Data and Sales identified 6 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
Mobile closed 210 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 17 hours.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $171,000, in line with the plan for the year.
The Sydney office hosted 37 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 76 out of 100.
The Singapore office hosted 23 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 82 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Support identified 11 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.

Section 13: Security - Berlin

The Austin office hosted 38 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 71 out of 100.
The Madrid office hosted 40 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 80 out of 100.
In March, the Finance team in Toronto reviewed its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 25%.
Platform closed 92 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 13 hours.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $130,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
In April, the Platform team in Dublin automated the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 26%.
Finance closed 33 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 5 hours.
In May, the Data team in Singapore automated its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 20%.
The Warsaw office hosted 29 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 96 out of 100.
Support closed 128 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 14 hours.
In March, the Mobile team in Osaka expanded the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 28%.
In November, the Mobile team in Singapore consolidated its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 13%.
A cross-functional review between Data and Marketing identified 4 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.
The Dublin office hosted 39 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 88 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Support identified 4 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $734,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Marketing closed 195 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 30 hours.
In August, the Data team in Dublin audited its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 8%.
The Austin office hosted 24 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 80 out of 100.
Sales closed 37 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 17 hours.
Finance closed 384 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 4 hours.
Payments closed 262 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 3 hours.
A cross-functional review between Data and Sales identified 9 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $591,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
In November, the Platform team in Osaka consolidated its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 5%.

Section 14: Security - Toronto

A cross-functional review between Payments and Legal identified 5 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
The Madrid office hosted 6 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 70 out of 100.
In July, the Marketing team in Singapore migrated the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 25%.
In July, the Security team in Madrid migrated the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 10%.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $308,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
In April, the Sales team in Madrid redesigned the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 8%.
The Austin office hosted 36 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 71 out of 100.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $605,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $520,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Mobile closed 256 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 5 hours.
Security closed 126 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 14 hours.
The Singapore office hosted 25 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 73 out of 100.
The Warsaw office hosted 38 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 93 out of 100.
In September, the Mobile team in Madrid completed its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 19%.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $330,000, in line with the plan for the year.
The Toronto office hosted 31 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 85 out of 100.
In June, the Platform team in Singapore audited the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 6%.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $120,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Support closed 181 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 22 hours.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $116,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $664,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
In April, the Finance team in Chicago audited its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 28%.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Finance identified 12 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
In May, the Platform team in Madrid reviewed its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 4%.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $844,000, slightly under the plan for the year.

Section 14: Data - Toronto

Spending on its onboarding process came in at $158,000, in line with the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Marketing identified 6 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
The Chicago office hosted 37 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 73 out of 100.
In November, the Finance team in Osaka consolidated the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 15%.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Marketing identified 6 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $187,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Platform closed 79 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 29 hours.
In October, the Sales team in Madrid expanded its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 24%.
In May, the Legal team in Warsaw automated the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 4%.
Security closed 122 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 5 hours.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Marketing identified 8 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
In July, the Data team in Chicago completed the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 17%.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $60,000, in line with the plan for the year.
In April, the Marketing team in Toronto automated the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 16%.
Marketing closed 42 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 11 hours.
Marketing closed 357 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 22 hours.
In December, the Payments team in Osaka completed its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 19%.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Legal identified 9 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $95,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
In June, the Security team in Osaka expanded its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 7%.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Legal identified 9 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
Payments closed 217 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 16 hours.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $827,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
In January, the Payments team in Chicago consolidated the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 11%.

Section 14: Support - Osaka

A cross-functional review between Platform and Legal identified 11 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
In August, the Finance team in Austin audited the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 19%.
In February, the Security team in Warsaw redesigned the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 15%.
In June, the Legal team in Dublin expanded its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 22%.
The Singapore office hosted 38 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 71 out of 100.
The Dublin office hosted 37 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 70 out of 100.
Marketing closed 154 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 18 hours.
In January, the Mobile team in Singapore consolidated the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 23%.
The Austin office hosted 12 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 81 out of 100.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $479,000, in line with the plan for the year.
In February, the Finance team in Singapore completed its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 10%.
The Chicago office hosted 18 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 87 out of 100.
In March, the Platform team in Warsaw audited the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 17%.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Marketing identified 12 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
In September, the Data team in Toronto completed its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 20%.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Finance identified 4 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $821,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Marketing identified 6 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
In July, the Data team in Dublin reviewed the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 15%.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $322,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
In December, the Sales team in Toronto completed its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 20%.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Sales identified 10 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.

Section 14: Security - Osaka

Mobile closed 193 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 12 hours.
In November, the Security team in Toronto completed the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 26%.
In February, the Marketing team in Dublin expanded the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 28%.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $538,000, in line with the plan for the year.
The Warsaw office hosted 22 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 92 out of 100.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $443,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Support identified 8 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $322,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $724,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $414,000, in line with the plan for the year.
In May, the Payments team in Chicago consolidated the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 23%.
Platform closed 222 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 3 hours.
The Chicago office hosted 6 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 92 out of 100.
Support closed 306 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 18 hours.
Sales closed 59 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 15 hours.
Data closed 215 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 26 hours.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $383,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Security and Finance identified 6 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
The Toronto office hosted 14 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 84 out of 100.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $670,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
The Toronto office hosted 21 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 85 out of 100.
In October, the Marketing team in Austin audited its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 22%.
Payments closed 388 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 7 hours.
Data closed 286 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 15 hours.
The Austin office hosted 15 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 86 out of 100.
The Berlin office hosted 8 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 74 out of 100.
Finance closed 349 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 5 hours.

Section 14: Legal - Madrid

Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $79,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
The Osaka office hosted 38 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 75 out of 100.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $360,000, in line with the plan for the year.
The Toronto office hosted 22 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 95 out of 100.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $321,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
In August, the Security team in Berlin completed the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 4%.
Mobile closed 261 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 10 hours.
The Dublin office hosted 39 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 94 out of 100.
The Osaka office hosted 30 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 76 out of 100.
The Sydney office hosted 29 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 87 out of 100.
In August, the Data team in Osaka reviewed its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 6%.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $222,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Sales identified 6 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Support identified 5 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
Payments closed 152 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 28 hours.
Support closed 257 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 21 hours.
In July, the Support team in Madrid consolidated its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 7%.
A cross-functional review between Data and Support identified 5 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Security and Sales identified 10 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
The Toronto office hosted 17 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 77 out of 100.
Marketing closed 316 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 24 hours.
Sales closed 55 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 6 hours.
Platform closed 291 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 20 hours.
A cross-functional review between Security and Support identified 3 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.

Section 14: Data - Sydney

In May, the Sales team in Austin consolidated its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 11%.
Platform closed 238 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 29 hours.
Platform closed 304 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 14 hours.
A cross-functional review between Security and Sales identified 3 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
The Madrid office hosted 31 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 73 out of 100.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $304,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
The Chicago office hosted 24 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 71 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Legal identified 5 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.
Marketing closed 362 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 20 hours.
In October, the Legal team in Berlin migrated its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 7%.
Legal closed 314 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 29 hours.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $49,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
In January, the Mobile team in Toronto reviewed its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 20%.
In October, the Legal team in Austin completed its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 9%.
Legal closed 44 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 16 hours.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Support identified 5 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $293,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Security and Support identified 10 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
In March, the Mobile team in Warsaw automated the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 3%.
The Berlin office hosted 38 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 75 out of 100.
Payments closed 389 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 20 hours.
The Chicago office hosted 38 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 95 out of 100.
Legal closed 33 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 29 hours.
In December, the Support team in Osaka reviewed the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 12%.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $720,000, slightly under the plan for the year.

Section 14: Sales - Austin

The Singapore office hosted 11 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 77 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Security and Marketing identified 6 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Data and Marketing identified 3 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $490,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Marketing closed 303 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 6 hours.
The Austin office hosted 25 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 71 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Marketing identified 11 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.
In October, the Sales team in Toronto reviewed its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 22%.
Data closed 23 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 28 hours.
The Singapore office hosted 11 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 83 out of 100.
Mobile closed 273 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 7 hours.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Sales identified 8 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $377,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Data closed 350 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 28 hours.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $804,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
In April, the Sales team in Toronto redesigned its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 7%.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $194,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
The Austin office hosted 16 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 89 out of 100.
The Madrid office hosted 18 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 94 out of 100.
Security closed 121 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 30 hours.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $762,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
In January, the Support team in Singapore consolidated the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 7%.
A cross-functional review between Security and Legal identified 11 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
In November, the Finance team in Madrid consolidated its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 13%.
Finance closed 398 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 13 hours.

Section 14: Security - Madrid

Legal closed 279 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 27 hours.
Marketing closed 30 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 28 hours.
In October, the Marketing team in Dublin reviewed its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 27%.
Platform closed 239 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 11 hours.
Finance closed 68 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 15 hours.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $64,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Data and Finance identified 5 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
In May, the Payments team in Chicago audited the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 28%.
Payments closed 50 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 22 hours.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $349,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $166,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
The Warsaw office hosted 25 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 94 out of 100.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $724,000, in line with the plan for the year.
In May, the Security team in Sydney migrated its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 4%.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $293,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Legal identified 7 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
The Chicago office hosted 9 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 82 out of 100.
Data closed 275 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 8 hours.
In November, the Security team in Berlin audited its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 28%.
The Sydney office hosted 6 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 74 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Data and Sales identified 6 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
In February, the Payments team in Sydney redesigned the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 16%.
The Sydney office hosted 32 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 78 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Security and Sales identified 12 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.

Section 14: Mobile - Singapore

The Chicago office hosted 36 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 72 out of 100.
The Toronto office hosted 9 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 72 out of 100.
In April, the Security team in Austin audited the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 23%.
In November, the Data team in Sydney completed its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 17%.
The Osaka office hosted 17 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 72 out of 100.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $266,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Support closed 205 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 27 hours.
The Chicago office hosted 34 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 72 out of 100.
In August, the Support team in Dublin expanded the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 17%.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $258,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $558,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Data and Marketing identified 6 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
The Osaka office hosted 13 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 94 out of 100.
The Dublin office hosted 20 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 90 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Legal identified 2 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
The Berlin office hosted 36 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 84 out of 100.
The Chicago office hosted 6 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 93 out of 100.
In September, the Platform team in Chicago redesigned the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 20%.
Finance closed 267 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 11 hours.
The Osaka office hosted 35 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 77 out of 100.
The Toronto office hosted 21 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 92 out of 100.
In January, the Platform team in Warsaw completed the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 19%.

Section 14: Legal - Madrid

Legal closed 388 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 16 hours.
Support closed 262 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 13 hours.
The Sydney office hosted 30 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 82 out of 100.
The Austin office hosted 23 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 79 out of 100.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $739,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Finance closed 349 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 27 hours.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $440,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
The Sydney office hosted 35 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 90 out of 100.
In August, the Finance team in Toronto reviewed the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 9%.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Finance identified 10 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Data and Finance identified 8 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
Security closed 113 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 25 hours.
A cross-functional review between Data and Sales identified 10 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
Payments closed 285 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 19 hours.
Platform closed 235 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 26 hours.
In December, the Marketing team in Osaka consolidated the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 21%.
In September, the Platform team in Toronto reviewed the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 7%.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $412,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Data closed 194 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 27 hours.
The Chicago office hosted 9 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 91 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Data and Marketing identified 7 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $469,000, in line with the plan for the year.
The Osaka office hosted 39 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 86 out of 100.
In July, the Platform team in Toronto audited its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 22%.
The Singapore office hosted 10 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 92 out of 100.
Platform closed 388 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 17 hours.

Section 15: Data - Chicago

Spending on its tooling budget came in at $217,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
The Austin office hosted 7 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 78 out of 100.
In February, the Support team in Singapore consolidated the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 17%.
In November, the Sales team in Madrid expanded its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 19%.
Data closed 96 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 27 hours.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $671,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $66,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
The Austin office hosted 25 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 87 out of 100.
Platform closed 248 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 5 hours.
The Singapore office hosted 38 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 82 out of 100.
The Madrid office hosted 5 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 72 out of 100.
In January, the Security team in Berlin expanded the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 6%.
The Singapore office hosted 7 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 77 out of 100.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $145,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $338,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $363,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Sales closed 112 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 15 hours.
Payments closed 369 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 9 hours.
Finance closed 115 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 23 hours.
The Berlin office hosted 12 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 96 out of 100.
In September, the Data team in Austin expanded its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 9%.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $339,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Legal closed 336 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 26 hours.
Mobile closed 277 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 15 hours.
In June, the Mobile team in Madrid completed the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 17%.
The Dublin office hosted 10 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 77 out of 100.

Section 15: Platform - Austin

Spending on its onboarding process came in at $391,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Data and Legal identified 9 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $767,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
The Warsaw office hosted 27 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 94 out of 100.
Sales closed 234 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 19 hours.
In April, the Mobile team in Berlin reviewed its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 17%.
Finance closed 154 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 6 hours.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $244,000, in line with the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Support identified 3 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
The Warsaw office hosted 18 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 76 out of 100.
The Dublin office hosted 36 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 92 out of 100.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $616,000, in line with the plan for the Quality: warranty claims rose to 2.7% of units shipped in Q3, up from 1.9% in Q2, driven by a faulty hinge supplier.
year.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $146,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $168,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Payments closed 188 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 20 hours.
Security closed 94 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 4 hours.
A cross-functional review between Security and Legal identified 10 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Support identified 5 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
The Dublin office hosted 29 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 87 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Security and Legal identified 4 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Data and Finance identified 4 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.
Platform closed 278 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 21 hours.
In June, the Marketing team in Singapore migrated its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 5%.
Support closed 21 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 25 hours.
The Austin office hosted 22 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 90 out of 100.

Section 15: Legal - Madrid

Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $681,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
The Madrid office hosted 10 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 71 out of 100.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $106,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
The Berlin office hosted 23 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 75 out of 100.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $205,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
The Madrid office hosted 30 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 74 out of 100.
The Sydney office hosted 6 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 76 out of 100.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $379,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $817,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $74,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
In November, the Mobile team in Chicago expanded the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 12%.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $166,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
The Singapore office hosted 21 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 87 out of 100.
In March, the Marketing team in Dublin reviewed the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 13%.
The Dublin office hosted 39 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 71 out of 100.
Payments closed 139 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 12 hours.
The Sydney office hosted 7 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 78 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Legal identified 9 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
The Austin office hosted 22 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 92 out of 100.
The Chicago office hosted 16 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 72 out of 100.
In March, the Support team in Dublin redesigned the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 13%.
The Warsaw office hosted 5 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 71 out of 100.

Section 15: Marketing - Madrid

Finance closed 227 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 4 hours.
In December, the Security team in Austin audited the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 10%.
Finance closed 259 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 12 hours.
A cross-functional review between Security and Sales identified 5 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
In January, the Security team in Dublin reviewed the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 11%.
Finance closed 278 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 6 hours.
In September, the Mobile team in Singapore audited the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 10%.
Finance closed 76 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 9 hours.
Support closed 166 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 8 hours.
In May, the Finance team in Austin reviewed its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 19%.
Marketing closed 159 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 3 hours.
In August, the Data team in Singapore reviewed the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 10%.
The Chicago office hosted 17 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 94 out of 100.
In April, the Mobile team in Dublin automated the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 15%.
The Toronto office hosted 20 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 78 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Security and Marketing identified 9 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
Marketing closed 140 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 25 hours.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $575,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Support closed 40 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 17 hours.
Finance closed 175 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 24 hours.
In October, the Legal team in Osaka reviewed the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 23%.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $494,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $461,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
In November, the Legal team in Toronto automated its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 27%.
Payments closed 177 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 18 hours.
In November, the Support team in Austin migrated its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 8%.

Section 15: Marketing - Warsaw

Marketing closed 274 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 13 hours.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $274,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $423,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
The Madrid office hosted 6 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 87 out of 100.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $425,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
In July, the Payments team in Austin audited the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 3%.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Sales identified 11 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
The Berlin office hosted 26 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 81 out of 100.
In October, the Legal team in Berlin consolidated the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 25%.
Security closed 33 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 15 hours.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $744,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $418,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
The Madrid office hosted 17 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 93 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Marketing identified 3 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $823,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
In July, the Payments team in Berlin reviewed its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 23%.
The Singapore office hosted 39 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 95 out of 100.
In December, the Security team in Singapore reviewed its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 19%.
The Berlin office hosted 34 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 96 out of 100.
Security closed 188 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 17 hours.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Legal identified 6 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
In December, the Security team in Chicago migrated its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 22%.
The Singapore office hosted 32 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 77 out of 100.

Section 15: Finance - Dublin

A cross-functional review between Mobile and Legal identified 5 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
In March, the Payments team in Madrid redesigned the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 24%.
The Dublin office hosted 39 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 75 out of 100.
In April, the Data team in Austin reviewed its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 5%.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $861,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
The Dublin office hosted 22 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 92 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Security and Marketing identified 3 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $484,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $459,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $313,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $824,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
In March, the Platform team in Madrid completed its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 5%.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $377,000, in line with the plan for the year.
The Warsaw office hosted 19 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 80 out of 100.
In October, the Sales team in Osaka consolidated the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 21%.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $659,000, in line with the plan for the year.
In December, the Payments team in Sydney expanded the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 17%.
In August, the Payments team in Singapore consolidated its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 7%.
In October, the Marketing team in Osaka automated the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 20%.
In February, the Security team in Austin consolidated its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 8%.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $245,000, in line with the plan for the year.
The Berlin office hosted 9 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 72 out of 100.
In April, the Sales team in Warsaw redesigned its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 18%.
The Madrid office hosted 38 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 88 out of 100.

Section 15: Finance - Madrid

The Berlin office hosted 22 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 70 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Legal identified 7 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
The Madrid office hosted 37 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 91 out of 100.
The Sydney office hosted 11 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 81 out of 100.
Mobile closed 83 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 13 hours.
Security closed 221 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 4 hours.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Sales identified 5 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
In October, the Finance team in Austin redesigned the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 18%.
The Osaka office hosted 36 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 85 out of 100.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $211,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $348,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Sales identified 5 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $767,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
The Singapore office hosted 33 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 87 out of 100.
Platform closed 359 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 15 hours.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $404,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $541,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Mobile closed 104 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 8 hours.
A cross-functional review between Security and Sales identified 10 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Marketing identified 5 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Security and Support identified 11 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.
Sales closed 205 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 24 hours.
Data closed 179 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 28 hours.
The Singapore office hosted 33 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 81 out of 100.
The Berlin office hosted 31 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 88 out of 100.

Section 15: Support - Madrid

The Dublin office hosted 8 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 86 out of 100.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $433,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Platform closed 309 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 26 hours.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $836,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
In March, the Security team in Singapore audited the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 21%.
The Singapore office hosted 38 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 75 out of 100.
In December, the Sales team in Sydney redesigned the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 23%.
The Madrid office hosted 18 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 74 out of 100.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $796,000, in line with the plan for the year.
In April, the Support team in Sydney audited its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 21%.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $431,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $404,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Security closed 264 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 14 hours.
Support closed 78 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 7 hours.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $212,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Sales closed 206 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 9 hours.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Marketing identified 7 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $748,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Platform closed 111 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 24 hours.
Sales closed 229 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 19 hours.
The Osaka office hosted 25 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 75 out of 100.
In December, the Marketing team in Sydney consolidated the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 20%.
The Singapore office hosted 23 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 82 out of 100.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $430,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Security and Legal identified 11 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.

Section 15: Data - Osaka

Sales closed 39 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 29 hours.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $326,000, in line with the plan for the year.
In September, the Payments team in Warsaw automated the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 11%.
A cross-functional review between Security and Finance identified 6 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $739,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Support closed 398 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 18 hours.
In April, the Marketing team in Chicago migrated the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 18%.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $146,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Security and Marketing identified 2 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Security and Finance identified 6 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.
In January, the Finance team in Toronto automated the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 22%.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Marketing identified 5 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $166,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Security and Marketing identified 8 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $583,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
In June, the Support team in Toronto migrated the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 10%.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $683,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $545,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
In September, the Sales team in Austin expanded the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 20%.
In June, the Legal team in Chicago reviewed the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 20%.
The Austin office hosted 19 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 92 out of 100.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $590,000, in line with the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Legal identified 9 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
In May, the Platform team in Warsaw redesigned the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 5%.

Section 15: Marketing - Singapore

Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $719,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Security closed 27 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 23 hours.
In March, the Sales team in Dublin redesigned its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 15%.
In December, the Finance team in Osaka expanded its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 15%.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $622,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $865,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Data and Marketing identified 9 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $231,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $548,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Payments closed 324 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 24 hours.
The Dublin office hosted 17 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 90 out of 100.
The Warsaw office hosted 14 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 91 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Support identified 4 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Data and Sales identified 5 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.
The Dublin office hosted 6 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 72 out of 100.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $853,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
The Osaka office hosted 4 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 78 out of 100.
Legal closed 206 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 26 hours.
In May, the Finance team in Warsaw expanded its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 25%.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Marketing identified 9 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $224,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Security and Sales identified 6 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
In August, the Data team in Madrid redesigned the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 23%.

Section 16: Mobile - Toronto

The Singapore office hosted 12 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 78 out of 100.
The Chicago office hosted 24 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 89 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Finance identified 8 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
In August, the Data team in Dublin expanded the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 7%.
Sales closed 333 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 29 hours.
The Berlin office hosted 35 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 96 out of 100.
Marketing closed 197 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 23 hours.
The Sydney office hosted 37 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 83 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Legal identified 10 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
The Austin office hosted 11 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 92 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Security and Sales identified 12 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
The Berlin office hosted 15 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 75 out of 100.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $87,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Data and Finance identified 9 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Security and Sales identified 11 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $651,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Marketing closed 315 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 22 hours.
The Warsaw office hosted 13 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 76 out of 100.
The Sydney office hosted 37 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 85 out of 100.
The Dublin office hosted 22 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 75 out of 100.
In April, the Platform team in Berlin migrated the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 23%.
The Singapore office hosted 28 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 87 out of 100.

Section 16: Security - Dublin

Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $445,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $216,000, in line with the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Data and Legal identified 11 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.
The Warsaw office hosted 33 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 94 out of 100.
Platform closed 169 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 17 hours.
The Toronto office hosted 6 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 73 out of 100.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $855,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Security closed 33 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 22 hours.
Platform closed 126 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 19 hours.
In June, the Mobile team in Sydney migrated the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 12%.
The Toronto office hosted 15 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 95 out of 100.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $50,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Support closed 179 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 13 hours.
The Dublin office hosted 15 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 72 out of 100.
Platform closed 244 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 12 hours.
In March, the Platform team in Chicago completed the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 22%.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $123,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Legal closed 106 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 10 hours.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $279,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Payments closed 335 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 8 hours.
In October, the Marketing team in Sydney redesigned the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 26%.
In May, the Security team in Chicago completed the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 24%.
The Toronto office hosted 37 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 95 out of 100.
In April, the Marketing team in Sydney automated the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 15%.
Platform closed 224 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 14 hours.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $783,000, slightly above the plan for the year.

Section 16: Finance - Osaka

Payments closed 61 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 19 hours.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $445,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
In February, the Sales team in Berlin migrated its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 18%.
In August, the Platform team in Dublin audited its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 16%.
Marketing closed 306 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 20 hours.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Legal identified 3 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
Finance closed 196 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 27 hours.
The Toronto office hosted 20 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 91 out of 100.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $78,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $194,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
In November, the Support team in Sydney redesigned the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 7%.
In January, the Security team in Austin migrated the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 20%.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $407,000, in line with the plan for the year.
In February, the Mobile team in Singapore redesigned the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 12%.
A cross-functional review between Data and Legal identified 11 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
In November, the Sales team in Dublin completed the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 15%.
Sales closed 378 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 11 hours.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Marketing identified 10 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
The Osaka office hosted 30 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 95 out of 100.
The Madrid office hosted 23 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 74 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Data and Marketing identified 8 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $126,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $579,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
The Osaka office hosted 21 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 96 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Marketing identified 3 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.

Section 16: Data - Singapore

Security closed 53 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 12 hours.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $203,000, in line with the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Finance identified 8 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
In April, the Legal team in Osaka consolidated its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 14%.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $477,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
The Sydney office hosted 22 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 80 out of 100.
The Austin office hosted 14 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 95 out of 100.
In December, the Mobile team in Chicago consolidated the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 15%.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $843,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
In May, the Legal team in Warsaw redesigned the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 21%.
In September, the Security team in Berlin expanded the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 16%.
The Sydney office hosted 22 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 94 out of 100.
The Osaka office hosted 21 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 89 out of 100.
The Sydney office hosted 13 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 89 out of 100.
In February, the Support team in Toronto audited the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 3%.
A cross-functional review between Security and Marketing identified 12 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
Finance closed 291 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 11 hours.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $319,000, in line with the plan for the year.
In December, the Payments team in Austin redesigned the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 7%.
Data closed 191 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 29 hours.
The Sydney office hosted 17 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 79 out of 100.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $612,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Payments closed 235 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 25 hours.
The Madrid office hosted 25 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 84 out of 100.

Section 16: Sales - Austin

A cross-functional review between Mobile and Finance identified 6 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
Payments closed 314 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 23 hours.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Support identified 7 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
The Singapore office hosted 6 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 81 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Finance identified 10 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Security and Legal identified 6 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
In May, the Mobile team in Dublin migrated its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 4%.
In August, the Finance team in Madrid audited the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 18%.
Payments closed 169 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 21 hours.
Payments closed 35 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 6 hours.
A cross-functional review between Data and Support identified 6 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
Platform closed 311 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 20 hours.
The Chicago office hosted 24 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 85 out of 100.
The Osaka office hosted 5 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 71 out of 100.
Finance closed 376 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 5 hours.
In November, the Finance team in Singapore consolidated the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 23%.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $519,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
In October, the Mobile team in Osaka redesigned the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 12%.
The Toronto office hosted 29 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 95 out of 100.
Legal closed 393 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 19 hours.
Mobile closed 80 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 15 hours.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $840,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Data closed 250 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 2 hours.
In May, the Marketing team in Austin audited its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 5%.
A cross-functional review between Security and Marketing identified 8 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.

Section 16: Mobile - Madrid

Spending on its tooling budget came in at $60,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $853,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $81,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
The Toronto office hosted 25 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 86 out of 100.
In July, the Legal team in Dublin completed its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 3%.
In April, the Marketing team in Austin redesigned its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 5%.
Legal closed 76 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 10 hours.
Finance closed 298 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 3 hours.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Sales identified 4 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Legal identified 7 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
In September, the Sales team in Singapore consolidated the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 17%.
In February, the Payments team in Osaka redesigned the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 5%.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Sales identified 7 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $408,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $315,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
The Warsaw office hosted 36 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 82 out of 100.
The Berlin office hosted 25 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 94 out of 100.
The Osaka office hosted 32 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 81 out of 100.
The Berlin office hosted 9 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 94 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Marketing identified 6 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $361,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $748,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $590,000, slightly above the plan for the year.

Section 16: Finance - Osaka

In June, the Payments team in Austin expanded the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 12%.
In November, the Legal team in Madrid consolidated the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 5%.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $277,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $52,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
The Singapore office hosted 12 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 92 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Marketing identified 9 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $519,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
The Warsaw office hosted 32 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 83 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Data and Legal identified 7 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.
In February, the Sales team in Singapore expanded the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 5%.
The Toronto office hosted 20 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 77 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Marketing identified 11 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Marketing identified 8 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
In May, the Platform team in Sydney completed its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 14%.
The Chicago office hosted 28 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 91 out of 100.
Payments closed 355 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 3 hours.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Finance identified 4 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
In December, the Mobile team in Toronto migrated the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 14%.
In February, the Mobile team in Sydney audited the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 11%.
The Warsaw office hosted 26 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 78 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Security and Marketing identified 5 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
Sales closed 253 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 10 hours.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Sales identified 4 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.

Section 16: Platform - Osaka

In October, the Platform team in Dublin redesigned its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 23%.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $423,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Finance closed 212 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 4 hours.
In May, the Sales team in Toronto redesigned its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 18%.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Legal identified 9 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
Security closed 358 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 21 hours.
Payments closed 231 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 2 hours.
The Dublin office hosted 14 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 73 out of 100.
Platform closed 295 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 13 hours.
Support closed 75 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 22 hours.
In April, the Security team in Sydney completed the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 12%.
In January, the Security team in Madrid migrated the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 13%.
A cross-functional review between Data and Legal identified 8 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $829,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
In November, the Legal team in Singapore expanded its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 8%.
Data closed 213 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 12 hours.
A cross-functional review between Security and Finance identified 5 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $297,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Data and Support identified 3 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
Legal closed 390 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 12 hours.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $650,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
The Austin office hosted 17 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 96 out of 100.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $724,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
The Chicago office hosted 38 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 83 out of 100.
Data closed 67 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 6 hours.
In July, the Marketing team in Austin expanded its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 8%.

Section 16: Marketing - Dublin

The Chicago office hosted 31 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 75 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Marketing identified 9 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Support identified 3 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $316,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $223,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $420,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Mobile closed 132 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 27 hours.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $586,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
The Madrid office hosted 35 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 74 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Security and Support identified 6 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
The Warsaw office hosted 23 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 74 out of 100.
The Madrid office hosted 12 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 88 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Finance identified 11 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
The Berlin office hosted 24 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 91 out of 100.
In April, the Data team in Chicago redesigned the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 11%.
The Singapore office hosted 9 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 81 out of 100.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $308,000, in line with the plan for the year.
In May, the Platform team in Madrid reviewed the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 15%.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Support identified 6 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
Security closed 218 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 15 hours.
The Madrid office hosted 12 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 86 out of 100.
Security closed 64 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 21 hours.
A cross-functional review between Security and Marketing identified 11 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
In December, the Platform team in Sydney automated the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 22%.

Section 16: Data - Austin

A cross-functional review between Mobile and Legal identified 6 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
In July, the Payments team in Toronto consolidated the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 4%.
In July, the Finance team in Dublin redesigned its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 11%.
Platform closed 304 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 29 hours.
Data closed 380 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 30 hours.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Marketing identified 4 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
The Warsaw office hosted 40 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 70 out of 100.
The Chicago office hosted 40 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 73 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Marketing identified 7 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
In September, the Payments team in Osaka reviewed the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 19%.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $145,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Marketing identified 7 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
The Chicago office hosted 32 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 90 out of 100.
In August, the Mobile team in Berlin redesigned the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 6%.
In March, the Marketing team in Dublin audited its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 15%.
A cross-functional review between Security and Support identified 8 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
The Sydney office hosted 35 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 81 out of 100.
In July, the Legal team in Singapore completed its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 18%.
Mobile closed 203 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 30 hours.
The Warsaw office hosted 6 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 75 out of 100.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $873,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $292,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Finance closed 388 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 7 hours.
The Warsaw office hosted 11 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 75 out of 100.

Section 17: Marketing - Toronto

Platform closed 334 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 29 hours.
In April, the Platform team in Sydney consolidated the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 8%.
In April, the Sales team in Chicago automated the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 8%.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Sales identified 9 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
The Toronto office hosted 16 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 86 out of 100.
Mobile closed 382 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 29 hours.
Legal closed 240 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 6 hours.
The Sydney office hosted 35 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 91 out of 100.
In September, the Support team in Osaka completed the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 7%.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $838,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Data and Legal identified 8 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
The Singapore office hosted 36 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 78 out of 100.
Platform closed 280 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 28 hours.
In November, the Marketing team in Singapore reviewed its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 15%.
The Sydney office hosted 30 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 91 out of 100.
Legal closed 100 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 24 hours.
The Chicago office hosted 22 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 73 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Security and Marketing identified 7 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Finance identified 10 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
In June, the Support team in Austin audited the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 17%.
In October, the Platform team in Madrid migrated its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 19%.
The Berlin office hosted 28 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 73 out of 100.
The Osaka office hosted 5 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 78 out of 100.

Section 17: Mobile - Sydney

A cross-functional review between Security and Sales identified 7 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $589,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
The Osaka office hosted 37 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 71 out of 100.
In October, the Support team in Berlin migrated its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 8%.
The Warsaw office hosted 14 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 78 out of 100.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $102,000, in line with the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Data and Marketing identified 10 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
Payments closed 36 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 27 hours.
Sales closed 183 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 3 hours.
The Austin office hosted 21 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 79 out of 100.
In May, the Mobile team in Chicago audited its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 12%.
Support closed 69 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 8 hours.
A cross-functional review between Data and Legal identified 9 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
In June, the Data team in Sydney migrated the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 24%.
Support closed 318 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 17 hours.
Support closed 162 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 6 hours.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $619,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $718,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Data closed 72 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 25 hours.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $564,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $67,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
The Warsaw office hosted 31 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 72 out of 100.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $648,000, in line with the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Legal identified 8 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
The Warsaw office hosted 33 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 83 out of 100.
Data closed 344 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 6 hours.

Section 17: Mobile - Austin

Finance closed 387 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 7 hours.
Platform closed 54 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 5 hours.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Support identified 3 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $61,000, in line with the plan for the year.
The Austin office hosted 17 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 92 out of 100.
Data closed 280 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 6 hours.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $609,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
In January, the Marketing team in Chicago redesigned the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 3%.
Marketing closed 299 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 21 hours.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Marketing identified 5 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
The Singapore office hosted 26 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 93 out of 100.
In August, the Support team in Berlin completed the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 4%.
In June, the Finance team in Osaka redesigned the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 5%.
The Osaka office hosted 5 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 90 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Data and Legal identified 2 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
In July, the Security team in Osaka completed the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 15%.
In March, the Platform team in Madrid completed the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 15%.
Sales closed 41 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 16 hours.
Payments closed 353 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 15 hours.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $668,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
In January, the Payments team in Austin consolidated the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 14%.
Legal closed 230 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 11 hours.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $402,000, in line with the plan for the year.
The Osaka office hosted 27 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 72 out of 100.
In February, the Finance team in Toronto expanded its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 17%.
The Dublin office hosted 7 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 78 out of 100.

Section 17: Platform - Dublin

A cross-functional review between Security and Marketing identified 4 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Data and Sales identified 5 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Legal identified 12 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
The Warsaw office hosted 33 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 95 out of 100.
In March, the Marketing team in Madrid automated its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 26%.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $851,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
In November, the Marketing team in Singapore migrated the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 6%.
Marketing closed 259 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 20 hours.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $528,000, in line with the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Data and Finance identified 3 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $708,000, in line with the plan for the year.
The Madrid office hosted 10 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 79 out of 100.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $722,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $229,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Data and Marketing identified 3 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
The Singapore office hosted 12 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 83 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Finance identified 2 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
The Sydney office hosted 30 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 79 out of 100.
Data closed 146 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 12 hours.
The Toronto office hosted 22 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 94 out of 100.
In September, the Payments team in Madrid migrated the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 26%.
Support closed 76 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 25 hours.

Section 17: Sales - Berlin

Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $52,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
In July, the Platform team in Osaka automated its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 23%.
Data closed 242 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 26 hours.
The Dublin office hosted 37 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 87 out of 100.
Legal closed 248 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 23 hours.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $103,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
The Osaka office hosted 18 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 83 out of 100.
Mobile closed 231 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 24 hours.
The Toronto office hosted 12 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 79 out of 100.
The Sydney office hosted 12 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 83 out of 100.
Data closed 50 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 25 hours.
Finance closed 50 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 18 hours.
The Singapore office hosted 36 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 81 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Security and Finance identified 8 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Support identified 6 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
In November, the Data team in Berlin consolidated its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 17%.
The Osaka office hosted 38 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 73 out of 100.
In November, the Legal team in Toronto completed its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 7%.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $846,000, in line with the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Data and Finance identified 8 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
In May, the Payments team in Berlin expanded its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 23%.
In June, the Payments team in Berlin audited the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 26%.
Sales closed 245 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 17 hours.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $614,000, slightly under the plan for the year.

Section 17: Finance - Madrid

The Dublin office hosted 13 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 74 out of 100.
In April, the Security team in Berlin migrated its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 17%.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $796,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
In March, the Marketing team in Dublin audited the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 9%.
The Berlin office hosted 5 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 79 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Legal identified 10 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
The Singapore office hosted 31 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 75 out of 100.
The Austin office hosted 20 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 93 out of 100.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $821,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $143,000, in line with the plan for the year.
The Warsaw office hosted 35 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 82 out of 100.
Legal closed 242 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 16 hours.
Sales closed 363 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 10 hours.
The Austin office hosted 26 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 83 out of 100.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $462,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $810,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Security and Sales identified 5 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
The Berlin office hosted 10 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 88 out of 100.
Mobile closed 276 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 24 hours.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $852,000, in line with the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Sales identified 5 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $291,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Legal closed 194 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 17 hours.
The Osaka office hosted 35 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 91 out of 100.
In February, the Data team in Osaka completed the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 19%.

Section 17: Support - Austin

A cross-functional review between Payments and Support identified 3 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
Payments closed 307 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 20 hours.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $361,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Legal identified 5 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
In April, the Legal team in Dublin migrated its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 5%.
In October, the Support team in Singapore reviewed its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 17%.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $584,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
The Sydney office hosted 6 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 92 out of 100.
The Osaka office hosted 18 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 87 out of 100.
The Austin office hosted 5 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 92 out of 100.
The Dublin office hosted 25 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 72 out of 100.
Payments closed 228 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 24 hours.
In February, the Legal team in Warsaw consolidated the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 5%.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Finance identified 9 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
In November, the Platform team in Singapore migrated the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 3%.
The Dublin office hosted 29 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 92 out of 100.
In January, the Data team in Chicago consolidated its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 7%.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Sales identified 8 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $670,000, in line with the plan for the year.
The Berlin office hosted 25 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 77 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Data and Legal identified 7 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Data and Support identified 9 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.

Section 17: Finance - Madrid

A cross-functional review between Platform and Sales identified 10 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
The Singapore office hosted 4 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 87 out of 100.
The Warsaw office hosted 32 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 82 out of 100.
The Madrid office hosted 12 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 82 out of 100.
The Chicago office hosted 22 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 84 out of 100.
In November, the Payments team in Warsaw completed its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 9%.
Payments closed 213 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 15 hours.
Security closed 236 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 17 hours.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Sales identified 7 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $544,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Finance closed 303 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 21 hours.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Marketing identified 3 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
In March, the Support team in Toronto completed its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 21%.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Support identified 4 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
In January, the Finance team in Osaka audited its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 12%.
Payments closed 251 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 16 hours.
Marketing closed 130 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 30 hours.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $445,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Marketing identified 9 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
The Sydney office hosted 6 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 71 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Data and Support identified 12 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
The Madrid office hosted 12 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 76 out of 100.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $856,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
The Sydney office hosted 5 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 86 out of 100.

Section 17: Security - Dublin

A cross-functional review between Platform and Marketing identified 10 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $235,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Security closed 208 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 15 hours.
The Warsaw office hosted 30 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 82 out of 100.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $557,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $486,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Mobile closed 390 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 14 hours.
Marketing closed 243 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 24 hours.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Support identified 11 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
Mobile closed 119 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 28 hours.
A cross-functional review between Data and Marketing identified 6 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
The Madrid office hosted 26 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 75 out of 100.
The Singapore office hosted 12 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 75 out of 100.
Finance closed 316 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 7 hours.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Sales identified 11 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
The Osaka office hosted 35 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 73 out of 100.
The Dublin office hosted 4 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 90 out of 100.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $609,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Data and Support identified 5 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Marketing identified 4 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $406,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Support closed 209 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 3 hours.
Finance closed 163 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 7 hours.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $373,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
In December, the Mobile team in Austin migrated the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 7%.

Section 17: Legal - Singapore

In January, the Sales team in Singapore audited the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 8%.
In July, the Payments team in Chicago reviewed the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 9%.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $373,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
The Singapore office hosted 22 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 92 out of 100.
The Dublin office hosted 29 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 79 out of 100.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $675,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Sales closed 149 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 29 hours.
The Warsaw office hosted 21 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 72 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Finance identified 10 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Sales identified 3 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $755,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Data closed 203 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 16 hours.
A cross-functional review between Security and Finance identified 10 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
Security closed 127 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 16 hours.
In July, the Payments team in Austin reviewed the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 6%.
The Toronto office hosted 25 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 71 out of 100.
In December, the Data team in Warsaw audited the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 28%.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Sales identified 10 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
The Austin office hosted 29 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 83 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Finance identified 2 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
In September, the Marketing team in Berlin reviewed the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 25%.
In June, the Mobile team in Sydney consolidated the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 20%.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Support identified 3 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.

Section 18: Payments - Dublin

Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $691,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Payments closed 189 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 8 hours.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Marketing identified 3 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $196,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $117,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $800,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
In May, the Finance team in Sydney migrated the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 10%.
In March, the Mobile team in Austin redesigned the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 9%.
Data closed 170 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 2 hours.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Marketing identified 8 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
The Dublin office hosted 33 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 81 out of 100.
The Chicago office hosted 4 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 88 out of 100.
In July, the Payments team in Warsaw expanded the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 5%.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Marketing identified 9 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Sales identified 12 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
In May, the Data team in Berlin audited the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 7%.
Sales closed 384 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 13 hours.
In May, the Support team in Dublin expanded its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 7%.
Support closed 74 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 12 hours.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Finance identified 10 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $294,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
The Austin office hosted 39 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 86 out of 100.
The Madrid office hosted 34 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 90 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Finance identified 10 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.

Section 18: Mobile - Osaka

Support closed 207 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 16 hours.
In August, the Mobile team in Dublin expanded the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 4%.
In December, the Mobile team in Madrid consolidated its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 14%.
Mobile closed 360 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 24 hours.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $618,000, in line with the plan for the year.
In October, the Marketing team in Osaka consolidated the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 20%.
The Sydney office hosted 20 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 95 out of 100.
The Madrid office hosted 36 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 79 out of 100.
In March, the Platform team in Austin migrated the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 27%.
The Singapore office hosted 7 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 71 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Sales identified 10 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $158,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $841,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Finance closed 91 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 12 hours.
In January, the Platform team in Dublin consolidated its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 14%.
The Toronto office hosted 34 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 94 out of 100.
In October, the Support team in Osaka audited the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 14%.
Mobile closed 267 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 8 hours.
A cross-functional review between Data and Marketing identified 11 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
In January, the Support team in Chicago automated the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 11%.
In June, the Mobile team in Toronto reviewed the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 13%.
In October, the Support team in Warsaw audited its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 17%.
The Singapore office hosted 37 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 93 out of 100.

Section 18: Legal - Berlin

A cross-functional review between Data and Marketing identified 10 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Sales identified 6 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.
The Berlin office hosted 32 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 85 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Marketing identified 6 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Marketing identified 8 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
The Chicago office hosted 16 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 70 out of 100.
Data closed 348 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 21 hours.
Legal closed 153 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 13 hours.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $697,000, in line with the plan for the year.
The Chicago office hosted 35 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 91 out of 100.
The Osaka office hosted 38 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 78 out of 100.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $467,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
In July, the Finance team in Singapore migrated its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 8%.
The Toronto office hosted 19 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 94 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Support identified 8 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Sales identified 4 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
In May, the Security team in Warsaw reviewed the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 27%.
In July, the Finance team in Berlin migrated the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 22%.
In March, the Sales team in Osaka audited the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 11%.
Support closed 275 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 20 hours.
In December, the Platform team in Warsaw completed the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 20%.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $545,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
In May, the Payments team in Madrid migrated the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 26%.

Section 18: Legal - Singapore

In September, the Sales team in Sydney reviewed the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 27%.
A cross-functional review between Security and Finance identified 7 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
Support closed 237 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 16 hours.
In April, the Data team in Osaka redesigned its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 20%.
In June, the Platform team in Madrid migrated its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 11%.
In August, the Platform team in Singapore completed the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 6%.
A cross-functional review between Data and Support identified 6 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
In June, the Security team in Austin completed the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 7%.
The Osaka office hosted 19 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 75 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Legal identified 6 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $379,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Finance closed 160 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 23 hours.
In July, the Data team in Warsaw consolidated the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 8%.
In October, the Payments team in Austin audited the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 17%.
In May, the Data team in Sydney reviewed the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 26%.
The Chicago office hosted 23 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 95 out of 100.
The Madrid office hosted 35 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 71 out of 100.
Mobile closed 396 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 16 hours.
A cross-functional review between Security and Finance identified 9 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
The Chicago office hosted 12 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 85 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Finance identified 5 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
The Singapore office hosted 35 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 85 out of 100.

Section 18: Security - Toronto

The Dublin office hosted 20 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 85 out of 100.
The Madrid office hosted 6 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 84 out of 100.
Finance closed 369 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 26 hours.
The Madrid office hosted 14 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 76 out of 100.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $381,000, in line with the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Marketing identified 10 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $90,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
The Madrid office hosted 31 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 90 out of 100.
Data closed 35 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 28 hours.
In October, the Mobile team in Chicago redesigned its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 27%.
Sales closed 197 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 29 hours.
In March, the Sales team in Chicago redesigned the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 14%.
The Toronto office hosted 38 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 86 out of 100.
Payments closed 290 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 3 hours.
A cross-functional review between Data and Marketing identified 4 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
The Osaka office hosted 36 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 92 out of 100.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $836,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $182,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Security closed 112 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 15 hours.
In April, the Platform team in Berlin reviewed the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 18%.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $631,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Security closed 306 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 20 hours.
The Warsaw office hosted 19 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 74 out of 100.
In December, the Sales team in Austin automated the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 23%.
Legal closed 67 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 28 hours.

Section 18: Mobile - Dublin

The Toronto office hosted 16 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 74 out of 100.
The Austin office hosted 14 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 78 out of 100.
The Warsaw office hosted 23 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 84 out of 100.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $321,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Platform closed 278 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 3 hours.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $227,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
The Berlin office hosted 27 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 77 out of 100.
Regional headcount at year end: EMEA 118, APAC 74, Americas 203. Total: 395 employees.
In January, the Sales team in Chicago expanded the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 24%.
Sales closed 72 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 13 hours.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $431,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $327,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $750,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
The Osaka office hosted 15 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 95 out of 100.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $202,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
In August, the Data team in Toronto expanded the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 6%.
In April, the Legal team in Berlin automated its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 27%.
In May, the Mobile team in Berlin expanded the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 24%.
In November, the Platform team in Austin redesigned the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 20%.
Support closed 216 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 17 hours.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $535,000, in line with the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Legal identified 10 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $735,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
The Madrid office hosted 16 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 78 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Data and Sales identified 11 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.

Section 18: Security - Osaka

Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $509,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
In July, the Mobile team in Singapore reviewed the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 28%.
In August, the Finance team in Austin automated its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 27%.
The Chicago office hosted 30 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 76 out of 100.
In April, the Legal team in Chicago reviewed the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 3%.
The Sydney office hosted 7 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 89 out of 100.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $229,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
The Chicago office hosted 39 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 93 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Security and Support identified 10 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
The Chicago office hosted 8 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 81 out of 100.
In June, the Security team in Warsaw migrated its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 24%.
In April, the Mobile team in Sydney completed the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 20%.
A cross-functional review between Data and Support identified 6 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
The Chicago office hosted 8 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 77 out of 100.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $195,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $736,000, in line with the plan for the year.
In March, the Mobile team in Osaka consolidated its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 26%.
In December, the Data team in Dublin expanded its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 8%.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Finance identified 7 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $698,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
In December, the Mobile team in Berlin audited the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 7%.
Support closed 128 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 26 hours.

Section 18: Security - Singapore

A cross-functional review between Security and Sales identified 5 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Security and Legal identified 7 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $207,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
The Singapore office hosted 4 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 79 out of 100.
In June, the Legal team in Berlin migrated the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 18%.
In July, the Platform team in Osaka consolidated the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 24%.
In June, the Platform team in Warsaw reviewed the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 27%.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Marketing identified 5 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Marketing identified 7 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
Marketing closed 210 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 6 hours.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Finance identified 4 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $81,000, in line with the plan for the year.
The Austin office hosted 27 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 84 out of 100.
The Sydney office hosted 29 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 83 out of 100.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $425,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Legal closed 128 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 17 hours.
Payments closed 103 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 9 hours.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Legal identified 6 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
The Warsaw office hosted 38 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 70 out of 100.
Finance closed 225 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 25 hours.
Mobile closed 98 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 18 hours.
Finance closed 98 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 27 hours.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Support identified 6 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
The Singapore office hosted 37 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 88 out of 100.

Section 18: Security - Singapore

Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $854,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
The Sydney office hosted 6 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 92 out of 100.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $498,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
In September, the Marketing team in Warsaw completed the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 3%.
In September, the Sales team in Warsaw audited the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 23%.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $679,000, in line with the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Finance identified 4 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
In August, the Data team in Madrid reviewed its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 13%.
Support closed 389 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 26 hours.
Finance closed 22 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 5 hours.
A cross-functional review between Security and Support identified 7 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $871,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $153,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Security and Sales identified 9 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
In October, the Payments team in Madrid redesigned the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 11%.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $762,000, in line with the plan for the year.
The Chicago office hosted 33 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 85 out of 100.
The Dublin office hosted 36 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 74 out of 100.
Finance closed 144 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 4 hours.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $829,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
The Austin office hosted 31 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 80 out of 100.
In November, the Mobile team in Toronto expanded the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 14%.
The Singapore office hosted 40 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 79 out of 100.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $558,000, in line with the plan for the year.
In September, the Security team in Sydney expanded its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 7%.

Section 18: Sales - Austin

Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $87,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $859,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Data and Support identified 4 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
In December, the Support team in Toronto consolidated the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 20%.
A cross-functional review between Data and Legal identified 11 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
Finance closed 271 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 14 hours.
In November, the Mobile team in Dublin expanded the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 10%.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $228,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Payments closed 69 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 6 hours.
The Dublin office hosted 5 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 81 out of 100.
The Singapore office hosted 23 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 81 out of 100.
In September, the Data team in Chicago migrated the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 23%.
The Toronto office hosted 32 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 71 out of 100.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $840,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
The Singapore office hosted 36 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 86 out of 100.
The Dublin office hosted 18 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 76 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Data and Support identified 9 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $60,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $85,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Payments closed 349 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 21 hours.
In July, the Support team in Sydney expanded the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 4%.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Marketing identified 10 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
Mobile closed 181 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 8 hours.

Section 19: Platform - Madrid

In August, the Mobile team in Sydney expanded its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 12%.
The Dublin office hosted 22 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 84 out of 100.
In January, the Platform team in Dublin automated its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 27%.
In June, the Sales team in Toronto migrated the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 18%.
The Madrid office hosted 28 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 94 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Data and Support identified 2 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
In May, the Mobile team in Singapore audited its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 11%.
In January, the Sales team in Madrid automated its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 27%.
In April, the Data team in Madrid migrated the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 9%.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $64,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Finance identified 3 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
Marketing closed 38 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 23 hours.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $792,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Finance closed 66 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 15 hours.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $441,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Mobile closed 385 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 24 hours.
In January, the Sales team in Austin expanded its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 20%.
In March, the Payments team in Berlin audited its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 4%.
Marketing closed 221 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 24 hours.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $236,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $189,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Marketing identified 10 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Marketing identified 6 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.

Section 19: Platform - Singapore

A cross-functional review between Platform and Sales identified 5 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $362,000, in line with the plan for the year.
The Austin office hosted 39 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 93 out of 100.
In February, the Mobile team in Chicago consolidated its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 3%.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Marketing identified 10 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
The Chicago office hosted 11 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 77 out of 100.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $807,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Finance identified 2 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
The Toronto office hosted 12 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 90 out of 100.
The Berlin office hosted 13 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 80 out of 100.
Payments closed 85 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 19 hours.
A cross-functional review between Data and Support identified 8 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $390,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
In December, the Legal team in Chicago consolidated the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 10%.
The Madrid office hosted 18 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 94 out of 100.
Platform closed 117 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 16 hours.
The Warsaw office hosted 34 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 89 out of 100.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $325,000, in line with the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Security and Support identified 5 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
In April, the Platform team in Toronto audited the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 20%.
In February, the Marketing team in Madrid migrated the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 24%.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $741,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Sales closed 94 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 8 hours.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Support identified 9 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.

Section 19: Support - Singapore

Marketing closed 88 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 26 hours.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $175,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Finance identified 8 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
The Austin office hosted 31 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 81 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Support identified 5 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $528,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $760,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $477,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
In January, the Security team in Berlin automated its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 5%.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Finance identified 12 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $264,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Legal closed 385 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 4 hours.
Platform closed 40 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 26 hours.
Platform closed 278 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 21 hours.
In December, the Payments team in Madrid completed the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 10%.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $274,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Security closed 86 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 11 hours.
The Chicago office hosted 15 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 81 out of 100.
Legal closed 280 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 3 hours.
The Madrid office hosted 6 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 88 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Support identified 4 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
The Madrid office hosted 4 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 74 out of 100.
Sales closed 123 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 21 hours.
The Singapore office hosted 17 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 92 out of 100.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $886,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
In September, the Mobile team in Chicago completed its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 13%.

Section 19: Marketing - Sydney

In July, the Finance team in Warsaw audited the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 7%.
In June, the Data team in Warsaw automated the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 23%.
A cross-functional review between Data and Legal identified 9 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Security and Finance identified 5 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
In November, the Support team in Austin completed the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 17%.
In January, the Marketing team in Warsaw expanded the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 6%.
Marketing closed 319 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 26 hours.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $94,000, in line with the plan for the year.
In September, the Finance team in Sydney audited its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 21%.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $629,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Finance closed 77 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 13 hours.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $70,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Sales closed 376 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 3 hours.
In November, the Sales team in Toronto audited the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 5%.
Marketing closed 210 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 5 hours.
A cross-functional review between Data and Support identified 5 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $381,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $377,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Security closed 63 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 7 hours.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Legal identified 5 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
Payments closed 320 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 24 hours.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Support identified 4 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $651,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $206,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Data closed 154 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 13 hours.
Mobile closed 81 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 19 hours.
Sales closed 293 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 3 hours.

Section 19: Support - Chicago

The Madrid office hosted 34 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 71 out of 100.
The Chicago office hosted 21 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 77 out of 100.
In January, the Sales team in Singapore completed its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 26%.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Support identified 11 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.
Support closed 264 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 2 hours.
In March, the Security team in Austin audited the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 21%.
A cross-functional review between Data and Finance identified 8 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $310,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Platform closed 164 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 20 hours.
The Dublin office hosted 34 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 74 out of 100.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $722,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
In February, the Mobile team in Dublin automated the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 23%.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Finance identified 8 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
Finance closed 227 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 7 hours.
The Dublin office hosted 16 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 94 out of 100.
The Singapore office hosted 33 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 96 out of 100.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $819,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Finance closed 135 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 9 hours.
The Warsaw office hosted 9 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 85 out of 100.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $224,000, in line with the plan for the year.
The Sydney office hosted 22 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 94 out of 100.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $878,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
In September, the Legal team in Osaka consolidated the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 9%.
In June, the Platform team in Toronto reviewed its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 11%.

Section 19: Legal - Dublin

In March, the Sales team in Madrid expanded the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 11%.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $175,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $874,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
The Warsaw office hosted 37 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 79 out of 100.
The Chicago office hosted 22 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 90 out of 100.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $840,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
The Austin office hosted 16 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 78 out of 100.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $843,000, in line with the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Data and Support identified 3 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
The Berlin office hosted 8 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 95 out of 100.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $449,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Finance closed 311 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 8 hours.
Support closed 194 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 18 hours.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $376,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Marketing identified 3 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Marketing identified 6 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
The Sydney office hosted 29 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 77 out of 100.
The Berlin office hosted 21 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 81 out of 100.
In December, the Security team in Austin redesigned the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 16%.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Sales identified 3 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
The Berlin office hosted 27 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 76 out of 100.
Mobile closed 139 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 10 hours.
The Berlin office hosted 12 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 96 out of 100.

Section 19: Mobile - Singapore

A cross-functional review between Platform and Support identified 9 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $91,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Support closed 378 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 9 hours.
The Dublin office hosted 10 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 71 out of 100.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $456,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Marketing closed 310 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 5 hours.
The Sydney office hosted 27 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 91 out of 100.
In May, the Marketing team in Madrid redesigned the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 18%.
The Madrid office hosted 32 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 81 out of 100.
Platform closed 153 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 13 hours.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Finance identified 9 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
The Sydney office hosted 6 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 71 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Sales identified 2 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $190,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
The Singapore office hosted 38 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 71 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Marketing identified 4 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
The Osaka office hosted 20 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 73 out of 100.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $810,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Finance closed 291 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 20 hours.
The Warsaw office hosted 26 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 88 out of 100.
In April, the Mobile team in Dublin audited the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 24%.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $850,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $272,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $867,000, slightly above the plan for the year.

Section 19: Mobile - Madrid

A cross-functional review between Security and Marketing identified 7 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Security and Sales identified 5 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $713,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
The Sydney office hosted 38 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 82 out of 100.
The Singapore office hosted 19 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 83 out of 100.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $472,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $464,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
In February, the Marketing team in Singapore consolidated the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 25%.
In July, the Sales team in Chicago migrated its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 18%.
In August, the Data team in Dublin audited the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 26%.
The Sydney office hosted 31 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 96 out of 100.
In September, the Sales team in Chicago completed the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 8%.
Mobile closed 237 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 17 hours.
A cross-functional review between Security and Support identified 5 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
In November, the Mobile team in Dublin completed its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 17%.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Marketing identified 5 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.
Platform closed 396 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 25 hours.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Support identified 3 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $232,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
In September, the Payments team in Dublin audited its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 26%.
In July, the Mobile team in Singapore audited its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 12%.
A cross-functional review between Security and Legal identified 7 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.

Section 19: Platform - Warsaw

A cross-functional review between Data and Marketing identified 7 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Support identified 2 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
The Singapore office hosted 7 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 95 out of 100.
In February, the Data team in Dublin automated the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 3%.
Sales closed 212 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 5 hours.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $433,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
In November, the Legal team in Sydney completed the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 28%.
Marketing closed 394 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 3 hours.
In February, the Sales team in Sydney completed its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 21%.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Support identified 2 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
The Warsaw office hosted 11 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 93 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Security and Sales identified 12 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $340,000, in line with the plan for the year.
The Sydney office hosted 16 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 84 out of 100.
In June, the Platform team in Osaka reviewed the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 8%.
Payments closed 396 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 12 hours.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Support identified 9 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
In February, the Data team in Sydney expanded its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 14%.
In May, the Data team in Dublin automated its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 18%.
The Madrid office hosted 38 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 91 out of 100.
Finance closed 321 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 20 hours.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Support identified 11 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.

Section 19: Platform - Osaka

A cross-functional review between Security and Sales identified 3 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $828,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Mobile closed 171 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 19 hours.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Legal identified 11 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.
In January, the Platform team in Dublin migrated the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 20%.
The Madrid office hosted 7 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 81 out of 100.
The Austin office hosted 6 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 89 out of 100.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $119,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $896,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Support closed 262 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 2 hours.
The Dublin office hosted 20 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 85 out of 100.
Mobile closed 344 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 19 hours.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $41,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
The Toronto office hosted 16 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 95 out of 100.
In June, the Legal team in Madrid migrated the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 13%.
A cross-functional review between Security and Legal identified 10 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
In July, the Legal team in Austin completed the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 8%.
In February, the Legal team in Toronto completed the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 27%.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $831,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Security closed 255 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 19 hours.
A cross-functional review between Data and Sales identified 9 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
The Toronto office hosted 40 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 90 out of 100.
The Osaka office hosted 23 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 82 out of 100.

Section 20: Platform - Chicago

The Berlin office hosted 38 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 83 out of 100.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $365,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
In October, the Finance team in Singapore automated its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 4%.
In October, the Marketing team in Dublin migrated the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 15%.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $317,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Security closed 284 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 13 hours.
The Singapore office hosted 12 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 91 out of 100.
Support closed 247 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 24 hours.
A cross-functional review between Data and Sales identified 3 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
In June, the Mobile team in Dublin expanded the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 13%.
Platform closed 22 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 24 hours.
Finance closed 110 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 23 hours.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Support identified 5 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Sales identified 5 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
In August, the Marketing team in Dublin completed its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 25%.
Legal closed 278 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 23 hours.
A cross-functional review between Data and Marketing identified 6 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $877,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $540,000, in line with the plan for the year.
In July, the Legal team in Singapore consolidated the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 19%.
The Chicago office hosted 12 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 71 out of 100.
The Toronto office hosted 21 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 76 out of 100.
In September, the Data team in Osaka audited its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 13%.
The Austin office hosted 16 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 87 out of 100.

Section 20: Mobile - Toronto

The Toronto office hosted 36 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 88 out of 100.
In May, the Support team in Singapore redesigned the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 20%.
The Sydney office hosted 25 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 82 out of 100.
In April, the Data team in Austin expanded its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 8%.
The Madrid office hosted 33 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 73 out of 100.
The Warsaw office hosted 22 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 96 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Data and Support identified 5 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
In December, the Data team in Osaka consolidated its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 6%.
In December, the Marketing team in Sydney redesigned the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 21%.
In May, the Payments team in Austin audited the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 8%.
Sales closed 393 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 14 hours.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $380,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $162,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $757,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Data and Marketing identified 2 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
Legal closed 215 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 5 hours.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Finance identified 4 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
Marketing closed 169 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 5 hours.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Legal identified 3 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
Finance closed 38 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 15 hours.
In September, the Marketing team in Dublin audited its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 27%.
In July, the Payments team in Austin reviewed the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 26%.
A cross-functional review between Security and Legal identified 6 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $773,000, slightly above the plan for the year.

Section 20: Support - Dublin

The Berlin office hosted 23 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 92 out of 100.
In September, the Sales team in Madrid completed the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 11%.
In June, the Platform team in Singapore automated the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 17%.
In December, the Support team in Austin reviewed its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 7%.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Legal identified 11 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
The Singapore office hosted 29 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 71 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Security and Sales identified 10 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Legal identified 10 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
The Dublin office hosted 25 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 88 out of 100.
In January, the Platform team in Madrid completed the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 16%.
Data closed 146 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 3 hours.
In November, the Sales team in Madrid reviewed its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 23%.
A cross-functional review between Security and Support identified 2 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
The Osaka office hosted 37 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 87 out of 100.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $774,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $653,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
In October, the Marketing team in Chicago consolidated the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 16%.
Finance closed 125 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 11 hours.
The Dublin office hosted 27 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 78 out of 100.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $221,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
In December, the Finance team in Madrid redesigned the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 10%.
In October, the Mobile team in Warsaw expanded the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 18%.
In August, the Data team in Osaka consolidated its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 15%.

Section 20: Marketing - Chicago

Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $862,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Marketing closed 239 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 14 hours.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $618,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Legal closed 93 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 6 hours.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $386,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $718,000, in line with the plan for the year.
In November, the Support team in Singapore consolidated the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 24%.
Mobile closed 115 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 15 hours.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $725,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Legal identified 10 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $520,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
The Osaka office hosted 16 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 85 out of 100.
Finance closed 212 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 12 hours.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $889,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Support closed 261 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 15 hours.
The Austin office hosted 29 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 70 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Sales identified 12 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.
In August, the Security team in Sydney automated its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 17%.
A cross-functional review between Security and Finance identified 2 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
In November, the Finance team in Dublin expanded the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 5%.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $803,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Mobile closed 49 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 18 hours.
Platform closed 82 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 19 hours.
In March, the Legal team in Warsaw automated its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 19%.
In January, the Finance team in Austin redesigned the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 15%.

Section 20: Mobile - Austin

In February, the Security team in Austin completed the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 5%.
In March, the Marketing team in Chicago automated the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 18%.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Marketing identified 9 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
In October, the Marketing team in Dublin expanded its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 23%.
In January, the Sales team in Berlin completed its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 15%.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Support identified 6 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
The Dublin office hosted 27 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 75 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Legal identified 3 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
The Singapore office hosted 37 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 77 out of 100.
The Chicago office hosted 33 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 72 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Data and Support identified 12 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $73,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Legal closed 258 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 17 hours.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $40,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $759,000, in line with the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Legal identified 3 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
The Madrid office hosted 11 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 80 out of 100.
Finance closed 171 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 9 hours.
Spending on the internal training program came in at $616,000, in line with the plan for the year.
Sales closed 275 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 13 hours.
Support closed 153 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 9 hours.
A cross-functional review between Security and Support identified 8 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.

Section 20: Platform - Warsaw

Platform closed 25 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 9 hours.
Spending on the on-call rotation came in at $762,000, in line with the plan for the year.
The Madrid office hosted 40 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 75 out of 100.
Security closed 327 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 13 hours.
In July, the Platform team in Warsaw audited the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 4%.
In January, the Sales team in Toronto redesigned the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 23%.
A cross-functional review between Security and Legal identified 3 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $551,000, in line with the plan for the year.
The Osaka office hosted 9 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 76 out of 100.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $114,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $723,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Security and Legal identified 12 process improvements, 1 of which shipped.
The Osaka office hosted 16 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 89 out of 100.
In May, the Support team in Singapore audited its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 15%.
A cross-functional review between Data and Marketing identified 12 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $407,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
The Austin office hosted 12 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 76 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Sales identified 8 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
The Toronto office hosted 10 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 90 out of 100.
In October, the Support team in Singapore automated the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 13%.
The Berlin office hosted 25 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 71 out of 100.
In January, the Finance team in Berlin automated the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 26%.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $841,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
In March, the Finance team in Berlin reviewed the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 13%.

Section 20: Mobile - Chicago

Support closed 331 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 23 hours.
Finance closed 228 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 8 hours.
Legal closed 85 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 21 hours.
The Osaka office hosted 12 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 95 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Sales identified 2 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $732,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Support identified 3 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
Spending on the customer escalation path came in at $760,000, in line with the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Security and Legal identified 12 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
The Berlin office hosted 28 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 93 out of 100.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $744,000, in line with the plan for the year.
In October, the Platform team in Austin reviewed the internal training program, which reduced cycle time by 21%.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $352,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Support identified 6 process improvements, 5 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Legal identified 6 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
Data closed 156 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 28 hours.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Legal identified 8 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
In March, the Support team in Warsaw expanded the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 6%.
A cross-functional review between Data and Sales identified 6 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
Marketing closed 295 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 26 hours.
Spending on the vendor contracts came in at $398,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Support identified 8 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
Mobile closed 286 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 13 hours.
In September, the Finance team in Dublin automated its onboarding process, which reduced cycle time by 28%.
In February, the Support team in Osaka expanded its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 9%.

Section 20: Security - Sydney

Data closed 296 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 16 hours.
Security closed 371 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 11 hours.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Marketing identified 2 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
In September, the Security team in Madrid audited the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 24%.
Security closed 205 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 17 hours.
A cross-functional review between Payments and Finance identified 3 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
In August, the Sales team in Warsaw redesigned its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 14%.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $257,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
Spending on the quarterly planning cycle came in at $425,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
In July, the Platform team in Dublin consolidated the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 26%.
In July, the Marketing team in Warsaw consolidated the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 17%.
A cross-functional review between Platform and Sales identified 5 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
The Berlin office hosted 4 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 75 out of 100.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $180,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
The Toronto office hosted 37 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 76 out of 100.
The Madrid office hosted 8 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 76 out of 100.
Security closed 241 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 10 hours.
In May, the Marketing team in Madrid consolidated the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 18%.
Data closed 363 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 29 hours.
In December, the Marketing team in Sydney completed the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 23%.
In May, the Finance team in Austin automated its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 13%.
Support closed 149 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 30 hours.
In July, the Payments team in Warsaw audited the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 20%.
In August, the Security team in Singapore redesigned the customer escalation path, which reduced cycle time by 6%.

Section 20: Legal - Osaka

Security closed 356 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 9 hours.
Security closed 44 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 3 hours.
In July, the Mobile team in Osaka audited the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 8%.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $748,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
The Berlin office hosted 10 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 88 out of 100.
Data closed 267 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 23 hours.
A cross-functional review between Data and Marketing identified 8 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
Data closed 344 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 23 hours.
A cross-functional review between Security and Legal identified 4 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
In June, the Platform team in Austin audited the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 16%.
In June, the Data team in Singapore audited its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 20%.
In December, the Security team in Berlin redesigned the quarterly planning cycle, which reduced cycle time by 18%.
In October, the Sales team in Madrid completed the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 23%.
In December, the Platform team in Madrid migrated its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 19%.
In June, the Platform team in Singapore completed the vendor contracts, which reduced cycle time by 11%.
The Toronto office hosted 12 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 90 out of 100.
Data closed 350 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 27 hours.
Mobile closed 60 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 15 hours.
A cross-functional review between Data and Support identified 7 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Security and Support identified 4 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
In September, the Support team in Sydney redesigned its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 19%.
A cross-functional review between Security and Finance identified 9 process improvements, 3 of which shipped.
A cross-functional review between Security and Support identified 3 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
In April, the Payments team in Dublin redesigned its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 28%.

Section 20: Data - Singapore

Platform closed 112 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 13 hours.
The Austin office hosted 35 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 85 out of 100.
Platform closed 149 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 10 hours.
Security closed 394 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 11 hours.
The Chicago office hosted 20 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 78 out of 100.
In April, the Payments team in Madrid expanded the on-call rotation, which reduced cycle time by 22%.
Spending on its onboarding process came in at $67,000, slightly under the plan for the year.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Legal identified 11 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
Finance closed 79 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 6 hours.
Platform closed 338 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 22 hours.
A cross-functional review between Mobile and Support identified 8 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
Legal closed 27 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 24 hours.
Spending on its tooling budget came in at $208,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
The Chicago office hosted 25 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 85 out of 100.
The Singapore office hosted 7 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 72 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Data and Sales identified 8 process improvements, 4 of which shipped.
Platform closed 201 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 17 hours.
Sales closed 333 internal tickets this quarter; the median resolution time was 27 hours.
The Sydney office hosted 35 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 85 out of 100.
In August, the Payments team in Sydney expanded its reporting dashboards, which reduced cycle time by 24%.
In December, the Payments team in Warsaw reviewed its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 13%.
A cross-functional review between Security and Marketing identified 5 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
The Chicago office hosted 5 customer workshops, with an average satisfaction score of 94 out of 100.
A cross-functional review between Data and Legal identified 5 process improvements, 2 of which shipped.
Spending on its reporting dashboards came in at $153,000, slightly above the plan for the year.
In January, the Sales team in Austin redesigned its tooling budget, which reduced cycle time by 21%.